The Year Book of Morrison R. Waite High School

Vol. VI

Edited and Published by THE SENIOR CLASS OF 1920

Dedication

To

JAMES A. POLLOCK

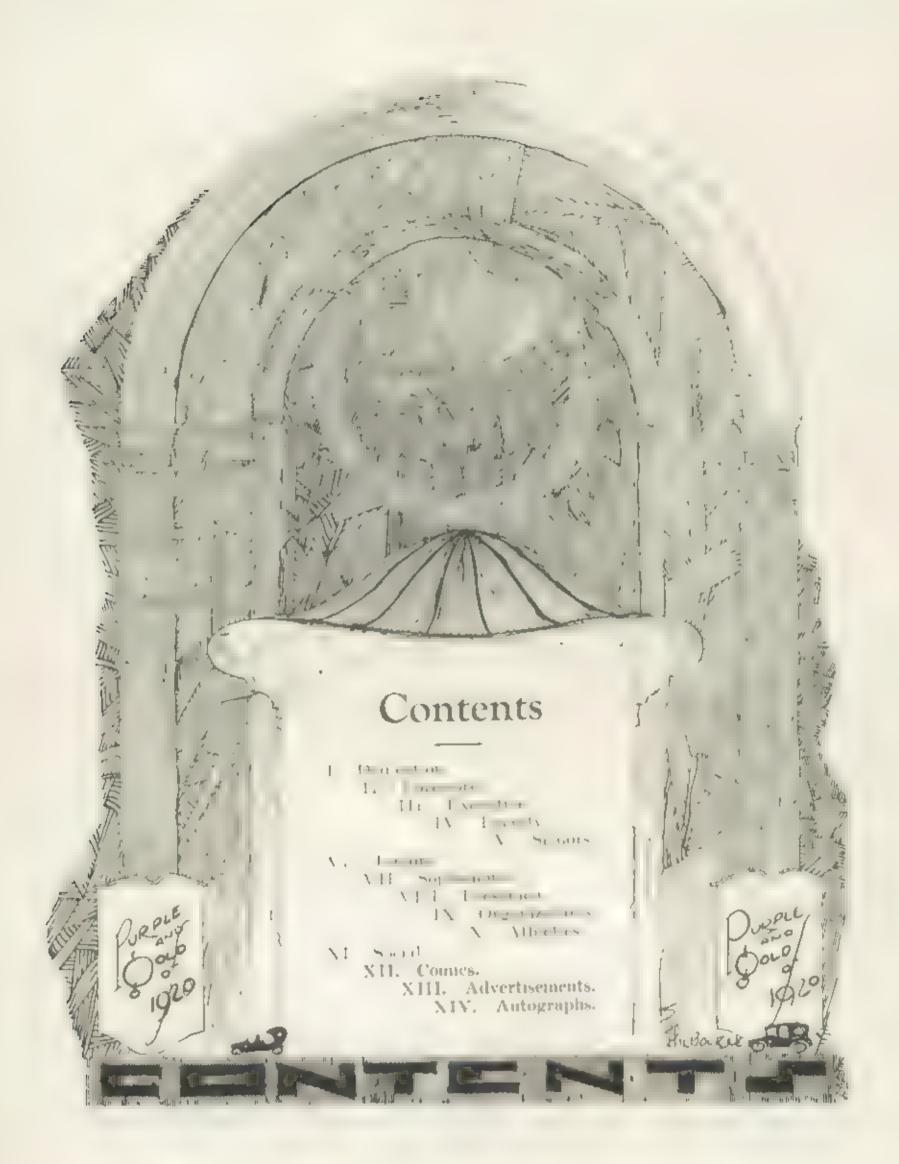

whose unfailing interest in every activity that promoted our advancement, and whose earnest devotion as a teacher and a principal has made our student days happy and beneficial, we, the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Twenty, dedicate this sixth volume of the "Purple and Gold."

Foreword

In assuming the responsibility of this book, our aim has been a full and interesting representation of high school life in all its phases. We have labored faithfully, in the hope that it pleases now and that it will help to recall pleasant memories in the future of the happy days spent in Waite.

Mr. Jas. A. Pollock

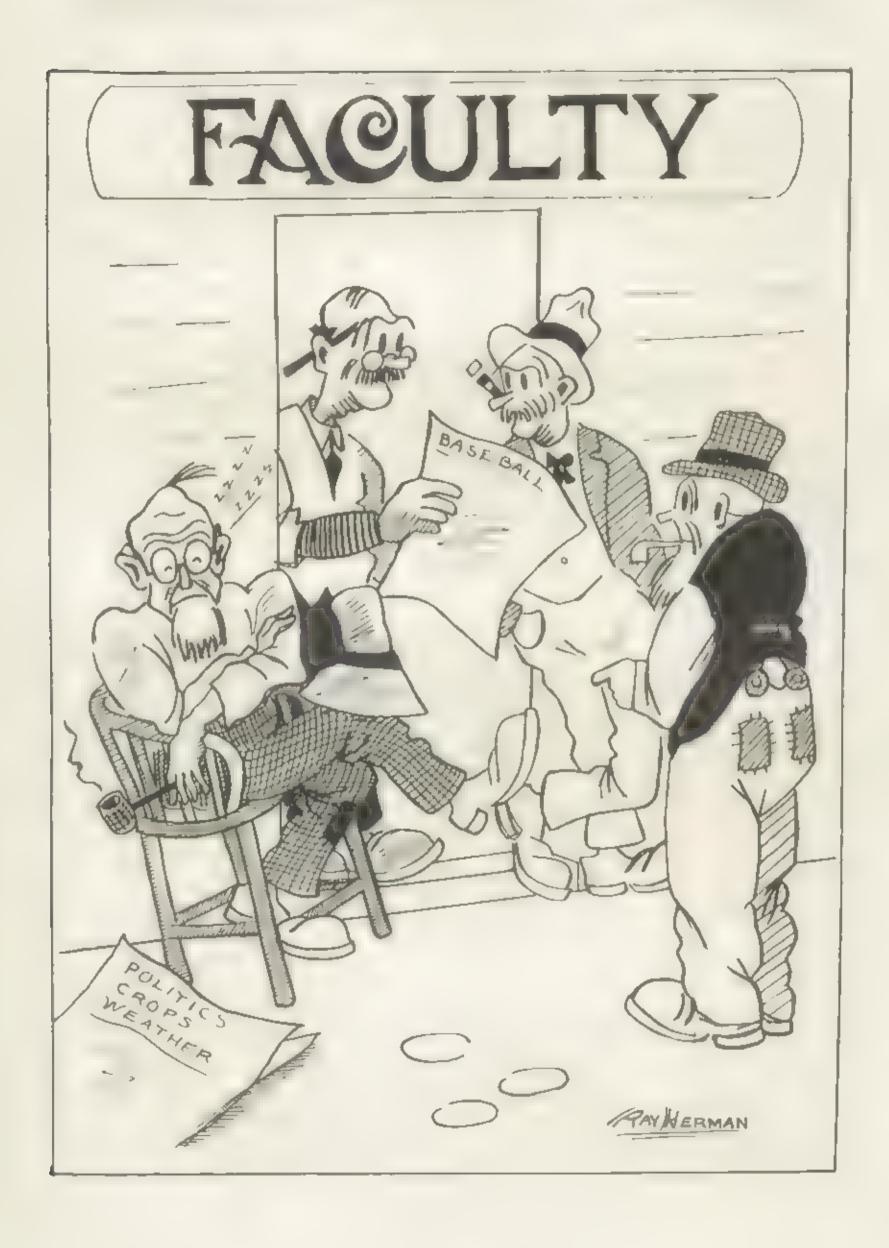

Students of Waite High School had their wishes gratified last year when Mr. Pollock was elected principal. The appointment of Mr. Pollock as principal was the dawn of a new era for Waite in all its activities. Mr. Pollock, having been faculty manager in athletics and a teacher in the school, knew the needs of both teachers and students. By applying new systems and studying the needs of Waite, Mr. Pollock has overcome, one by one, the difficulties that arose, from time to time, in the first year of his leadership. It matters not how trivial the difficulties of a student may be, Mr. Pollock is always ready to give a helping hand and some good sound counsel to anyone who seeks his advice and opinion. We feel well assured that the future will witness more of his splendid leadership, his generous spirit, and his kindly feeling toward all who are fortunate enough to be associated with him.

Mr. Keller and Mr. Barrow

In the steady march of events we must not fail to pay our respects and gratitude to the two men who make our existence at Waite comfortable. The men who supervise the sanitation and heat of the school are responsible for the health and welfare of the students. With these essential matters under the care of two men as efficient as Mr. Keller and Mr. Barrow, we may consider the health of the students safeguarded against any unsanitary or unpleasant conditions.

Waite has one of the best heating and ventilating systems of any school in the city. This plant requires an efficient man to care for it. Such kindnesses as opening the lockers for those who forget their keys or lose them make the Waite students still further indebted to these men.

The Purple and Gold

In autumn days, the country ways
Present their gorgeous blooms:
From every nook a flower looms;
A harmony of hues unfold:
The goldenrod and asters—
The purple and the gold.

The dandelion's fleece has blown;
The later flowers stand alone.
As winter's coming is fore-told,
Waite's favorite shades adorn the glades:
The marigolds and blazing stars—
The purple and the gold.

Two thousand years ago, or even more,
In lands beyond a wild and trackless sea,
There lived a race, by every foe most feared,
And known to savage peoples far and wide
For daring conquests made in distant climes,
Where mighty kingdoms swayed and rocked and fell,
When stormed by those bold Roman generals
The cruelest tale that ever tongue could tell
Would fail but sadly to describe their deeds
The world, with all its frightened peoples shook,
When mighty legions to the front lead way
To struggle hard in sharp and deadly strife

To lighten grief and lessen worldly care,
To take the sting from Death's relentless blow.
Or make the path of life an ensier way.
But, at the flower-decked shrines of heathen gods.
The Roman warrior made his sacrifice.
And then no matter what the odds might be.
Went forth to struggle on in sin and strife.
Content, that by his parting gifts of wine.
Or fatted sheep upon the altar slain.
He duly had appeased the powers sublime.
And thus was freed from sorrow, wound or pain.

Yet out of all this weary war and strife,
Arisen from the lasting grief of life,
Appeared a shining vision, pure and white—
A maiden fair in softest garments clad.
Upon her arm the fairest lilies lay,
Whose whitest petals drooped to hide in shame
As side by side with this pure spotless maid
Their tender beauty seemed but weak and vain.
Her eyes were raised in happy thoughts
Of sweetest music sung by hosts on high;
No goddess more than she is sought in prayer,
All men for worthy inspiration sigh.

And, hand in hand, and leading her along
In case, by chance she ship aside and fall,
When holy thoughts, the evil strive to blur
And joyous Pleasure her from work doth call,
Did friendly Opportunity draw near,
Her rosy cheek and sparkling eye of blue
Bespoke a joyous nature, with no fears
While Happiness and faithful Trust are nigh
She is the helpful friend of all mankind
As to each one she often gives her hand,
Yet many to her beckoning are blind
And let kind Opportunity pass by.

And thus these two have scattered joy and hope Throughout the land into the farthest realm At one time to the humble country folk. They take their helpful words of joy and cheer. A shepherd tending to his flocks. While o'er the grass they slowly graze about, Doth see appear from misty clouds of haze. As in a dream when one is fast asleep, The glorious thoughts and songs of poetry. Like faintest strains of sweetest music played By throngs of angels in eternity. While earthly plans of mortals wane and fade.

Now in the homes where wealth and ease are found And servants hasten to the slightest call. Where softest carpets still disturbing sounds And richest tapestries adorn the wall, Here, too, the helpful maidens pause awhile. To whisper softly in a willing ear The magic words and precious guiding laws

To free the earnest youth from hindering fear.
To make the stony road to fame less rough.
They give him light to show the path ahead.
And bid him always keep his sacred trust,
And oft for inspiration fair to pray.

Through all the ages that have gone before.

Through time of war and time of restful peace.

In years of hunger and of misery

Or periods of wealth and luxury.

At all times Inspiration kind and true

And Opportunity with helpful hand

Are giving freely of their gifts so rare

And oft where these rich blessings fall and grow

There springs a poet with his tuneful lays

A famous artist with his masterpiece.

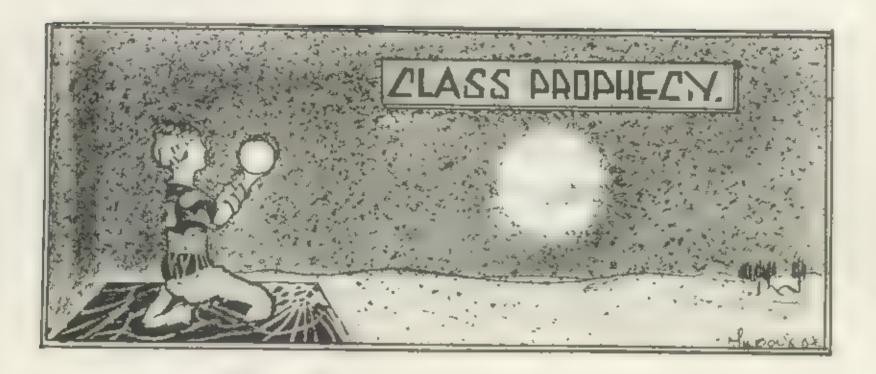

An author struggling through hie's hampering maze,

Or great musicians soulful melodies.

We cannot all to music turn our eyes
Or do great work in art's exalted realm,
But each one can this simple lesson learn
As first he takes his faltering steps through life.
Though art's high standard may not be attained
And music softly falls with broken wings;
That Inspiration always hovers near
To help mankind in many trials sore,
To raise his life to higher planes of thought
Where he will gain his laurels, high ideals.

And now, O classmates, may we one and all So guide our lives through each succeeding year. In everything that we may strive to do. That we may for the future have no fears, Let Inspiration be our trusty guide. And follow where she shows the shining way. In paths where Joy and hard-earned Fame have trod. And richest blessings tempt the pilgrim on; And may we always act with willing heart. When kindly Opportunity appears. To make the world a better, easier place. For those who follow us in future years.

-MILDRED AGNES Mc CALLA.

You have all heard the story of the search for the Fountain of Youth. In fact, many people would give much to find this mystic spring. But who has ever searched for the Fountain of Old Age? Few people have ever heard of such a well, yet there is in existence today a hidden spring and he who dracks of its water adds twenty years to his life. Therefore when I was asked to write a future for each member of our class, I determined to get actual facts. To do this I broke a time honored precedent, for never before has any woman voluntarily added twenty years to her age. But, feeling that duty demanded it I sought the Fountain of Old Age and plunged in. Simultaneously I advanced twenty years in life, Imagine my surprise at the wonderful changes in the world and at the var ous occupations in which I found my classmates to be engaged

Robert Babione, the second Luther Burbank, who had a fine experimental farm at Bowling Green, had developed a new odorless omen which opened the hearts of many housewives to him.

In place of Smith's Cafeteria, a new electric service eating house had been opened by Irene Dunn and employed there, as an entertainer, was Ora Critel et It is said that her marvelous dancing attracted many to the cafe and was instrumental in making the place a success.

Directly across the street from the cafeteria was the Young Men's Outfitting Shop of which Francis Steplanz was the proprietor. When I entered the shop a great surprise awarded me, for there, parading before a group of buyers, was my old friend, Roy Milbourne, whose build made him especially well adapted to his position is a model, showing the styles for shin young men. Among the buyers were Park LeGron, He more Carnall and Irene Hamberstone. While I was in the store who should enter with his wife but our president, Edward I amb. Who could have believed that our strong willed, resolute president could ever have developed into such a practing and mosk family man? Yet developed he had, and has sole object seemed to be to gratify every when that has capable and self-reliant spouse expressed.

About the year 1928, I dropped into the Rivoli to view the latest musical comedy which was being produced by Mildred Have. Who should I see as leader of the purlesque chorus but our football triend. Bom Petcoff—He was it the head of a group calling themselves the Beety Trust—in deemposed of Malechin McInnes, Howard Trautwein and Peter Quinlan. Pete was the only one of the group who ever married, but as his wife traveled with 1 mi, matrimony in no way hampered his career—James Leak had been in this celebrated chorus, but had left to enter the movies as successor to Fatty Arbuckle. I might also mention here that traveling with this group were the Misses Helen Cripe, Dorothy Bennett and Melva Johnson. Their main duty was to guard the properties and see that the chorus received plenty to eat—Boai was especially well pleased with the last named duty.

Marion Clark was traveling with her husband, a theatrical star. When his company came to Toledo her friends, Vera Barnes and Clara Palmer, both happaly married, extertained her livishly. The arrangements for the enter tainments were carried out by the leading caterers of the city, Nellie Hoag, Bessie Hoffman and Edna Hollopeter.

While strolling down the street one day I saw a large crowd gathered around a corner salesman. I walked toward them and received a shock, for who should the subsman be but my old frond Clyde Koser. Clyde was employing his oratorical powers in selling a new potate perfer, invented by a prominent lady scientist, Violet Campbell, and manufactured by the Chetister Potato Peeler Co.

Just then a street car went by bearing the sign, "To the Ball Park." I hopped on board and rode out to the field for I knew that I would see many of my friends there. It was in 1936, that a number of ex-Waite boys met together and formed a baseball team. They practiced and practiced until they became so proficient that the Toledo manager engaged the group to represent Toledo in baseball. The boys lined up like this:

Catcher......Charles Hider
PitcherTheodore Roberts
Umpire......Stephen Miller
Umpire......John McColl

While at the hall park I met the B ade Reporter, Helen Bristhary, who took me to several of her business associates and introduced me. However, no introductions were necessary, for who should they turn out to be but Ward Whiteomb, Edstor of the Bangville Bugle and Zo. Clark, Liner es Edstor of the same paper. I asked Zoe for information, about my old classifiets and was surprised when she told me that Swam Vin. Wormer was an necessary will be and that the maids on his route awaited the ice delivery eagerly. Zoe mentioned the names of two of these maids, Wilma Kuhr and Georgiana Metzger. I also learned that William Wells was in Bingville and occupied a position as leading vetermary and also the constable of this thriving hamlet.

You may be interested to know that George Hunter had made a place for limited on the list of the immortals when he played Cupid in the 1930 Folhes. He owes his success to his valet, Edwin Karl, keeper of George's quiver and wings, without which the act would have failed.

Hildegard Hering, the leading sign painter of Bacyrus, Olio, was quite surprised when the order for the new grocery store came in. It called for a sign reading, "Kievit's Cut Rate Grocery Store—Kum Here and Beat the H. C. L."

Other members of Waite's 1920 class who had become interested in art were Herb Colvin, who posed for the prize winning picture entitled, "Innocence Let Loose," and Harry Stegenga, the sculptor who carved the friezes in Toledo's Labor Temple. Florence Woods, in spite of her art lessons at the museum, never accomplished much in the line of art. In fact, all Tubby had ever drawn was water from the well.

The students of the class of '20 took the foremost places not only in art, but also in religion, politics and science. Eleanore Durian had given up her life here and had gone to the Fiji Islands is a missionary. Edythe Brumgardner had taken up Christian Science and was now earning her living as a Christian Science practitioner. Calvin Reed was a Methodist namister of the Billy Sunday school. Vashti Harmon for the last ten years had been a Y. W. C. A. sciretary. The greatest surprise of all was Lucille Kelley who had entered a convent. Many say she had been disappointed in love, but the real reason was never learned. However, she was now leading the life of a recluse and seemed contented to do so. Mary Bauer and Loyal Nofziger may be religious, but they certainly are of the newer type. Both had founded new-thought calts. Mary called hers the Spinster's Rehet Band and Loyal had identified himself as Swain of the Cult of the Seven Steins.

Many of the old crowd had entered vigorously into the political life of 1936. Erma Baird, when she went to the mayor's office to sell fire engines, was surprised to find bether Gerber filling that position. Needless to say that Esther gave her an order for old time's sake. That is the made history of the seign,000 fire ergine graft of 1937. Since 1920 a new party had spring up in America, the Anti Tobacco Party, and at its head was another conscentions Waite graduate, Donald Bacome. Durelle Oten, although he had never married, had written marriage heeness for other prople, while Marvin Wadmer held a position as plane traffe cop on top of the one hundred story building Durelle hoasted that he had written heenses for nearly all of his Waite friends, yet never for himself. Among his many customers were Bessie Grasser who had been married for years and Martha Sullivan who capably fieled the heart and home of a Methodist minister. As Geraldine I ash had been married three times up to date. Durelle didn't even have to ask her the usual questions when she appeared. He merely filled out her license.

Perhaps my greatest surprise which my insight into the future gave me was the progress tout had been made along scientific lines. Who would have believed that some day, instead of crossing the Cherry Street bridge by car, all that would be necessary was to catch hold of a pulley and be jerked across. This was a great time-saving my attom, for it only took two and one hal, minutes. This machine was invented by Max Shepherst. At either end of the bridge two familiar figures collected the toll. I heabeth Moran and Contrade Nadeau.

Hilda Feindt had contributed to humanity a new medical dog biscuit. I lorence Chiertner, her publicity agent and demonstrator was astrumental in bringing success to Hilda for it was through her efforts that Adam Croit's Dog Hospital had adopted the biscont in the treatment of its palents. Victor Crow's combination tooth brush and button hook was another commodity for which the world may thank an ex-Waite student. But perhaps the greatest invention may be described by copying an advertisement I saw. It read: "Why Let Your Baby Cry? Pacify It With Harold Wood's Baby Pacifier."

Mildred Pasch had not turned out as all signs had indicated that she would. Instead of marrying, she had opened a modiste's shop and had employed as models. Nin i Gladiux, Grace Laulkner and Mariam Hartman. The shop was a wonderful success, for the most exclusive society matrons of the city purchased their frocks there. You will recognize their names. Myrnah Ls mg and Laura Hanes. But purchasing expensive gowns in expensive shaps often hads to trouble as Annae Andrew had discovered. She totald herself with such a large modiste's bill that she was forced to part with her $30,000 necklace. You can imagine her surprise to find Vehiar Bodina's acting as everybody's analty in a Superior Street pawn shop.

Six years after we had been graduated, women obtained the vote. Suffrage led women into many miscidire professions. Vera Applegate was a salesman for the Modern Glass Co., and I raises Denniston headed the new Petrolatian Co... Ella Bender was captain of the Greyboard III and Zelma Kirkman was stewardess on the same boat. Speaking of the Greyboard remaided me of Sugar Island, where Helen Swinehart was taking tickets for the Loop-the-Loop.

But amid all of this commercialism there was one ex-Waite girl who had sacrificed herself and had contributed to the educational world her famous Latin Pony. I mean besse Belden, the author of the Latin Student's Friend.

Many of my old classmates had gone into vaudeville and had been successful too. "The Three B Tree" was composed of Carl Benson, Luther Brenner and George Booth. They were the three most successful jugglers in the country. Horace Donegan furnished the surprise of my young life. Myrtle Sarzenbucher, the Fgyptian dancer, had just completed her act. The curtain went down and rose again on a scene of wonderful irristry. All was quiet when a melodious voice burst into song and a superbly gowned woman came upon the stage. After rendering several beautiful songs she bowed, came to an erect position without her way, and stood revealed as Horace Donegan, the second Johen Fittinge. Charlotte Meagler dashed mady upon the stage crying. "I don't care, I don't care." My program explained it by saying that Miss Meagher was hailed by theater-goers as the second Eva Tanguay. She was supported by an excellent prop. Professor Harry Marday, the phrenologist and Roland Black, Jazz King on the saxophone. Another headliner was Eugene Weiss, impersonator of Icchabod Crane. The whole bill, as may be seen, was excellent to the nth degree.

Interesting to the theatrical was the famous Sullwold law-suit. The two Sullwold sisters (they were not really sisters) had applied for admittance to the Follies chorus. The judges of applicants to this chorus were Charles Charvat and Floyd Colbert. It is said that they never failed to pick stars. Said to relate the Sullwolds application was refused. They immediately suid the judges and hared the Nauts consust to defend them. With such able lawyers the Sullwold girls could not help winning the sait and it was rumared that they gained a comfortable fortune through the decision of the court.

Theatrical people were not the only Waite grads, who had obtained press notoriety. Zula Burkholder, the champion cross-country walker, and Opal Weida and Leona Stockton, tennis champions, commanded paragraphs in the duly sports' page, while George Schlosser, the polo hero, warranted a whole half page when he fell from his biplane on the way to the polo grounds.

In the columns of the "Daily Noise" were to be found the questions and answers of Dr. Myra Pratt. She was better known as the Mother's Guide, for when any one's buby swillowed a button or a penny or had any sort of accident, all that was necessary was to ask Doctor Pratt, and the correct remedy was immediately suggested. When the three children of Mildred McCilla drank the last of the Johannesberger and acted strangely, it was Doctor Pratt who discovered the cause and supplied the remedy. Doctor Pratt's able assistant was one of the old group, Ila Kirkland.

Don Dewey had employed some of the knowledge learned at high school when he opened a large dancing academy. Employed as his assistants were the Misses Mary Jones and Dorothy Kemp. Professor Dewey and his helpers were considered the most daring and proficient dancers in that locality.

Doris Yeagle and Thelma Lingle were still talking. They were making records for the new Edison machines. Ellen Yenzer and Loretta Zelner were associated with the same company, but they sang. Ellen was classed with Alma Gluck, but Loretta confined her vocal efforts to the latest rag time melodies. Doris Nelson, in spite of all her training used her voice for a very commonplace duty—that of singing little Doris to sleep.

Colinne McClure, Pearl Meyer and Helen Mohr had invented a new lotion called the "Three M's Remedy." It was warranted to grow hair on a bald surface, remove hair from the face, cure colds, catarrh, pneumonia and cozenia. Needless to say the sale of this medicine had brought the girls a large fortune.

Olga Rodemich who was hailed as the second Annette Kellerman traveled through Toledo in 1929. Her trainers, I inme Knows and Catherine Kruger, challenged all comers to deteat Olga in a three hundred yard dash. They believed this to be impossible, but they were mistaken, for Constance Wegman, a Y W. C. A product, accepted the challenge and came off victorious. Mildred Leeth, promoter of sports, cleared over $50,000 on this one race.

In conjunction with this meet, the Stitt swimming school entered a candidate who won from the Indiana state representative. Bob and his three assistants, Harry Garbe, Julius Geach and Norman Hart looked their best in bright red suits, with a single white stripe around the chest. Bob looked so winsome that namy ladies in the audience, among them Eumee Rier, Leta Loch biblier and Bertha Piel, were encouraged to better him in the daying contest. But appearances are often deceiving. The bets were lost when Bob hit flat on his first dive. Such is always the way of life.

Leslie Bender, who was in the employ of the Roose and Ruppel Tea Co., had gone to China as a tea taster. It was rumored that he had become addicted to the tea habit and consequently would never return to the states. Roland Barkenkamp was also in the tar east. At the close of his high school career he found houself with four glistening medials. Being unable to think of any practical use for them in America, he sought an oriental land where metal ornaments were the vogue. He was now wearing two as ear-rings and two as nose ornaments.

Claud Brown was still driving around in his old friend, the familiar flivver. He earned the almighty dollar by collecting junk and hired in his junk emporium, Eulele Rush and Mary Sayen.

Cecil Murphy was engaged in a similar profession, that of a ragman. His wife urged him to try some more refined occupation, but as Cecil enjoyed riding around, blowing his horn, he continued his rag-picking way.

Geneva Scharer had established a precedent when she took a position as porter on the Twentieth Century Limited. Treaded was a warner and now the traveling salesmen—lucky dogs—could have their coats brushed by smiling maids instead of by grinning darkies. Grace Sisson and Blanche Werner, members of this profession said that the tips alone won a munificent salary.

When Florence Shaw had taken her son to have his hair cut, who should she discover with a large pair of slears in his fand but Howard Smith. He had been head burber in Lasatle's for years, hat a finally opened a slop on Madison Avenue where all of the socially-elect had their babies' hair cut. While little Melly or Jimmy as the case may be thad his hair eat, mother had a maincure from either Nellie Sockman or Maud Scofield.

Some people in this world make money and gain little in the way of intellectual honors. Others gain honors but live in poverty. Of this latter type was Gordon Pheley who was made a Fellow of the Royal Society for writing a treatise on "The Pollywog and Its Relation to the Human Being"

I was standing on the banks of the Maumee one day, when to my surprise, directly in front of me, a sabmarine arose to the surface. Out upon the deek came Captain Ernest Reichart, Edward Riendean and Carl Reisbach. They fearlessly plied the waters of the Great Lakes guarding the coast from any possible invaders.

Another man, famous in nautical circles, was Wilbur Randel, the most successful bell-diver in existence. He had carned fame for himself by diving in among the wreckage of the Lusitania. Due to the accuracy of his reports the Wewinrkowski Silvage (o was able to raise and repair the great liner which was still in use as a passenger ship.

Jack Williams, farmiture manufacturer was about crazy with worry, for it was reported that Mildred Underwood who had been his secretary for years, was about to marry. He scolded, but as report had it that Jack himself had fallen a victim to Capid's darts, he could not say much. It was another illustration of the old saying, "People in glass houses should not throw stones."

Ethel Wiles and Bernice Williams, proneer homesteaders in British Columbia, had been surprised to discover "honest to goodness" gold deposits on their territory. They had immediately sent for Ruth Talbot, assayist. Her reports led to their establishing two mines, the "Oh Boy" and the "Some Girl." Their agent, Thelma Thompson, immediately opened offices in New York and the sale of stocks began. Thelma said that shares in the "Some Girl" sold rapidly in military camps, while stock of the "Oh Boy" went like hot cakes in feminine circles. The reason for this is very evident.

Russell Webster was a photographer in New York. His specialty was theatrical pictures and he delighted in posing the winsome stars of all the Broadway shows.

Harold Stemmueller the pugilist, had rather a mainine arrangement. He knocked out the teeth of his opponents and then recommended to them his dentist friend. William Steinhauer. William inserted new teeth and charged an enormous price. Then he and Harold divided the proceeds. In his way they managed to earn a comfortable living.

Marguerita Sullivan, owner of the "Come Dirty—Leave Clean Laundry," was surprised to find among the clothes to be wished a soldier's uniform with Alice Sturgeon's name in the collin. She immediately investigated and found that Alice was a heutenint in the U.S. A. Recruiting Corps and that she held the record for recruiting the greatest number of young men in the year 1938.

Only the other day when I went to order my coal, who should drive out of the yards but Herbert Straub. At first I thought he was a negron he was so black—but when he spoke to me I recognized him. He told me that he had been a coal driver for years and that as he enjoyed his daily drives he hoped to stick at that position.

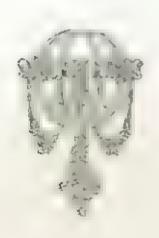

On my way home I met Robert Strub and from him learned a sad tale. Abram Smith-poor Abram-became so crazy on the subject of soap-box orations and debates, that it was necessary to enter him at the South Street Hospital. He had been found three times, lecturing to the innertes and he had so excited them that his relatives had been obliged to live a keeper. Robert Strub was that keeper.

With the years rapidly rolling by, tastes and customs change. French pastries used to be the vogue, but since Arpad Sarka had introduced his Greek confections, I rench desserts had been forgotten. Sarka's famous cooking drew many to the New Secor where he was the head chef.

You may wonder that I thought the discovering of your futures was worth adding twenty years to my age. Don't give me too mech credit. While walking down Adams Street, I saw a sign reading, "I all quette's Beauty Parlors. Come in and Let Us Remove Ten Years from Your Face." I went there twice and thus I list the twenty years I had added by plunging u to the Fountain of Age. So you see I gained a true insight into your fature, yet I lost nothing of my youth, after all.

-LUCRETIA ELIZABETH ABBOTT.

"Under Japanese Skies"

An article printed in Japanese characters in a Tosha paper, was translated thus: "The well known banker, Mr. C. L. Burns, from America, and aus daughter, Miss Jacqueline Burns, arrived in Japan, May the twenty fifth They are staying at the Oiwake Hotel."

Mr. Burns had found an easy chair on the veranda of the hotel where he sat smoking the afternoon away. Beside him sat a young American man whose tanned complexion marked the stry of a long time in tropical Japan. He sat there reading the newspaper, as if it were possible for him to make out those queer characters. Mr. Burns was bubbling over for want of a conversation with him. Would be ever get through reading that paper? Just as he had made up his mind to interrupt the reader, the young man turned to him, pointing to the paper, and asked:

"Pardon me, sir; but are you this Mr. Burns?"

"I'm Mr. Burns, sir, but how do you find me in that conglomeration of print?"

"Mr. Burns, I'm glad to know you. Kranstan, is my name. I'm the American consul for this district."

The two men arose from their chairs to shake hands. A flourishing conversation ensied, which was interrupted by the approach of a slender, graceful young woman, the fairness of whose complexion was accentuated by a wealth of soft black hair.

"Mr. Kranstan, I want you to meet my daughter, Miss Burns."

"How do you do? I'm pleased to know you," seemed to come in contralto and soprano tones at the same moment.

"How do you like Japan, Miss Burns?"

"Oh! Hasn't father told you?"

"Yes. He did say he would have to sail back with you."

"I just can't stand these than walled hotels, with sharp brown eyes peering through every crevice. I haven't a moment of privacy. I detest Japan! I dreamed of seeing artistic cottages and benutiful gardens, and here are the ugly buildings crammed in these narrow streets."

"I'm sorry, Miss Burns, you're so wrought up over this disappointment. As to these buildings, they aren't the property of the Japanese, but they belong to the foreigners who built them there to take in the good money of Japan, and they give her this ugliness, due to her ignorance. The Japanese, you know, are superstitious about 'going into business'. If you came to Japan to see scenery, you must go into the country."

Mr. Burns said in reply, "Jacqueline has come to Japan for ideas in Japanese customs, which she wishes to use for a tea room. Her grandfather left her a little property on the Maumee river, near Napoleon, Ohio, which she wishes to beautify, she says, 'in artistic Japanese style.' I believe she could have found better 'style' in Perrysburg."

Jacqueline perceived that Mr. Kranstan was thinking, and she did not disturb him.

"I have a brilliant idea, Miss Burns. I'm living at the house of Yezo Tangsu, up in the mountain near Yomoto, a city on Lake Chuzenji. Tangsu has a beautiful place and I shall ask him whether he will be able to accommodate you and your father also. I'll ted him that you want to be inspired by the beauty of his gardens. That will flatter him, and I feel sure he'll be pleased. Miss Burns, I have found Yomoto the prettiest place in Japan. You will enjoy the trip up the mountain, through the forest to the lake five thousand feet above the sea."

"Mr. Kranstan, that's the most thrilling that I've had! I think it would be wonderful!"

Mr. Kranstan left, returning the next day with the news that Tangsu was "delightfulce placed". Mr. Burns and Jacqueline packed their trunks, giving them to a 'cooke, a lyarced for Yomoto, guided by Roger Kranstan. What a delight it was to Jacqueline to leave the lated city and comb the moss covered steps through the bamboo forest up Mt. Nanti San. The smell of the moist earth was decreously retreshing, and the cool shade was restrict to her weary nerves. At last they reached the artistic cottages of which Jacqueline had so I mg dreamed. They walked through the town Y moto and Jacqueline was growing tired and anxious to arrive at her destination, however, Mr. Kranstan guided them still farther into another woody lane. Jacqueline, in despur, was ready to exclaim that she could go no farther, when she caught sight of the dearest Japanese cottage, built on a cleared space in the woods. Right beyond it was blue—the water of Lake Chuzenji.

"Why, Mr. Kranstan, what beautiful flowers! They're iris! And those pretty pink blossoms! What kind of tree is that?"

"Plum. So you do like Japan, Miss Burns?"

At the moment a stout Jap appeared before them.

"Miss Burns and Mr. Burns, I wish you to meet Yezo Tangsu."

Mr Burns extended his hand, but Tangsh was bowing low. The Americans perceived it better to follow this custom in their turn. Tangsh arose with the queerest babbling Jacqueline had ever heard. She was able to understand only his welcoming smile and gestures which were meant to invite them into the house. Tangsh entered, and sat on the floor, saying, "Delightedlee. Tea?" He motioned for them to sit on the floor, and they complied. Tangsh took a lattle tea pot from a little charcoal stove and powered one cup of tea which he passed to Mr. Burns, who drank it. Pouring more in the same cup, Tangsh passed it to Jacqueline, who did as her father had done. Kranstan drank after her, and lastly, Tangsh. Tangsh then passed a pipe in like manner for each to take one puff. Jacqueline's refusal to smoke caused excited babbling from Tangsh. This warned her against breaking peace in his house; accordingly, she was forced to puff at the dirty old thing in spite of her show of innocence.

When Jacqueline and her fither arose from their examped positions. Tangsu cilled, "Yoto" The cill was responded to by a pretty little Japanese lidy with spirkling eyes. Tangsu introduced her as "My girl, Yoto"

Jacqueline stepped forward and took the tiny hand.

"Yoto, I hope we shall be friends."

Yoto fairly beamed and showed her pretty whate teeth as she said, "Surfee, Miss Bur-r-ns."

The days passed quickly in this garden of plum blossoms. Yoto and Jacqueline loved to walk in the lanes along the lake to chat. One day was especially memorable, because the girls told life secrets. On this particular day, they sat on a rustic bench which overlooked the lake. Did Jacqueline ever see such marvelous scenery? Had she ever been with such a fascinating little being as this dunty girl, clothed in a silk kimona, embroidered in wild roses? And did she ever hear of such strange customs?

"Yoto, how did your father come to own such a beautiful garden?"

"Yoto's grandfather broke ceremony. He not like wicked way. He knew le was going to die. He tol magistrate he should not bury hers servants alive when he die. He say it was wicked. He tol that all money and hees house go to Tangsu."

"Why, Yoto, did they really bury men alive?"

"Yees. They thought it right to let dead man take all he own with him. I wondered why they never turned the gardens up side down."

There was silence a moment, then Yoto spoke.

"I'm so sad, Miss Jacqueleen. I think I won't live more."

"Why, Yoto, tell me, are you sick?"

"No, me just sorry. I kill myself for it maybe. Shima is a butcher in I sala, he sell nasty ment, he strong, he wicked. He marry me I'm eighteen Jane the twentieth I m eighteen. When Yoto was three weeks old she was sold to Shima for most money. Tangsu no care for me, just for money."

"Yoto, Yoto, you dear child, I wish I could take you home with me!"

"You have Yoto go with you?"

"Yes, Yoto, would you?"

"Yoto would."

Jacqueline told this unfortunate girl of America and American love. She told Yoto of the man she loved.

Chesterfield, whom I loved very much. Mercer loved me too, Yoto, and asked me to marry him, but I never promised that I really would. At the end of my four years at college, I lett, telling him that he was too poor, for I realized that I was a banker's daughter, accustomed to every thing I wished, and I teared I should not be happy with him. I tried to forget I im that sammer, Yoto, but I never knew until I was actually without him, how much I needed him. This last winter I have been heart-sick, yet I wouldn't write for him to come to me. I decided then that I must do something to occupy my mind. I begged father to bring me to Japan to learn your customs; that I might build a Japanese tea room on my return to America."

"Jacqueleen, you naughty girl. I know of American love too."

Jacqueline didn't seem to understand her meaning, she was dreaming of Mercer again, her big, stalwart Mercer. Why hadn't she realized that she would never find such love again?

The days rolled on, and as Roger Kranstan became better acquainted with Jacqueline, he fell in love with her. They spent much time together. He had not met a true American girl so sweet and so charming as Jacqueline anywhere in Japan, perlaps, not in the world. It is true he loved Yoto, loved to teach her to speak English, leved to instruct her in American ways, yes, truly, he loved to teach her American love. Yoto became very much in love with Roger, she hoped he would take her away from the claws of Shima. Yoto was ever watchful of Roger and had been jealous since Jaqueline had come. Never theless, the more Roger thought of Jacqueline, the more he thought it a sin against his race to marry Yoto.

The days were drawing nigh unto the twentieth of June. When was bequeline going to leave? Would she take Yoto from the country or would Roger be able to leave his consular post and take Yoto away? She would never get out of Shima's house, once she was in it, not even to walk through her pretty garden again. Action must come; and it came.

One night after their rice and tea, Roger took Jacqueline by the arm, and without a word, led her into the garden. The rest of the family were preparing for hed. Mr. Burns had been teching the change in climate and Jacqueline had become tired and heated from waiting on him the last few days. It was nearing the time when they were to leave Japan and Roger wished for a few words alone with Jacqueline. They walked along the mossy paths, the clear moon shone over the lake through the tree branches. Jacqueline longed for Mercer's presence, to drive away her lonliness. In fact, this walk with Roger pleased her, and she put her dainty white arm through his as they strolled silently along.

Suddenly Roger stood still, and said, very earnestly, "Jacqueline, these lave been blissful days for me the control you what pleasure your dear person has given me."

Jacqueline did not speak.

"Jacqueline, I love you!"

Her heart seemed to stop beating. Was she thrilled or was she afraid? She knew now—she was afraid. Roger drew her in his arms.

"A kiss Jacqueline?"

She turned her head away. She could have cried; oh, why wasn't Roger, Mercer? Her heart seemed to beat out these words: "Mercer, Mercer, if you only could hear my sobs!" No, she would not kiss Roger, she had saved her kisses for Mercer and she was going to keep them for him. She looked up—and saw a figure moving behind the trees. It was Yoto, she thought. This frightened Jacquehne for she remembered. "Yoto know of American love, too." Could it be that Yoto loved Roger? Jacquehne stirted hirriedly toward the cottage, followed by Roger, who was ignorant at the fact that Yoto had been watching.

Let us learn something of Mercer. Mercer had learned of Jacqueline's trip to Japan. He loved her, he wished he had money enough for her. A great idea came to Mercer, however. He had read of the great need of sanitation, to purify water in Japan. Babies, dishes and clothes were washed all in the same stream as it ran down a mountain. The tainly highest up would get the best choice, but those living at the bottom did not fare so well. If Mercer could undertake to establish a water system that would formish each house with pure water, he would be able to give one of the greatest aids. Sam tation, to an ignorant country.

Mercer Chesterfield sailed for Japan in great hopes of success in his plans and success in finding Jacqueline. On the day of his arrival in Tosha, be impaired at the Oiwake Hotel concerning Mr. Burns and his daughter.

Learning of their lodging at Tangsh, he was eiger to get one glimpse of Jacqueline, and he was determined to go up the mountain to do so. He started at sanset to climb the mossy steps up that beantifully wooded mountain. The soft reflection on the trees from that red sun in the west thrilled his lonely heart. Perhaps he would see Jacqueline in the girden; maybe he would even talk to her. On his lonely way up to distant Yomoto, he would say half aloud, "Jacqueline, dear Jacqueline, I'm coming."

At the point of Mercer's journey, when he was nearer to Yomoto than he was to Toshi, a strong wind sprang up, which made it bardly able for him to push forward. He would brave it, regardless of the peril! The wind howled, the lightning flashed, the rain came down in torrents. He pushed on and came in sight of the like; the furious wind seemed to swoop down in its depths and toss its angry waters. He followed the path to Tongsu's and stopped within sight of the cottage. A figure stood in the open door way; he heard him say, "Ah! It's a wicked night! A night for murder!" The figure withdrew; Mercer advanced to peek in, but it was useless, for the windows were shuttered up; however, he was close enough to hear voices. As he leaned his drenched hody against the building, he was able to distinguish what was said within. He heard a man's voice.

"This storm is probably only up in the mountain. This is an angry lake. The wind will die out by morning, calm your fears, Jacqueline."

"I can't! I'm going down to the village. I can't stand this storm."

"No, you must not go, my daughter; you would be drenched. You would be frightened to death, wilking down that mountain, alone, in this storm "

"I shall be glad to take her down, Mr. Burns."

"It's foolish! Nonsense! Go to bed, Jacqueline, and sleep your fears away."

"Goodnight, Jacqueline. Try to forget your fears."

The talking ceased. The speakers must have gone to bed; Mercer would better start back. What was that ha woman's figure had brushed through the door. Another figure followed, running as if to jump. Mercer saw in a flash that the latter had a dagger in her up-raised hand! He dashed forward, grasped the springing figure and the up rused hand, thus saving from death none other than Diequeline Burns Dacqueline turned instantly at the noise behind her. She beheld Yoto's figure squarmining under the firm grip of a man's hand. Innocent of Yoto's intention, she must save her.

"Release her!" she cried.

"Not now, Jacqueline." His voice was full of love.

Jacqueline's breath seemed leaving her body, she swayed, Mercer curved his free arm, and she fell within it.

"Yoto's sorry! She jealous. Forgive."

Yoto burst into tears. Even though Mercer unconsciously let go of her in the act of lifting Jacqueline in his arms, Yoto stood close, ready to serve. She saw the strong man tenderly kiss the lips of the unconscious girl, lying in his arms. Yoto opened the door of the cottage, and Mercer carried Jacqueline in and had her on the mat on the floor. Her eyes opened and she smiled when she beheld Mercer's face again, after this long year.

"Mercer-you dear."

The storm quieted during the night, and, in the morning, the faithful sun shone on the refreshed earth. Mercer was made welcome at Tangsu. Through Jacqueline's Christian love, she had forgiven Yoto, assuring the latter. Mercer, and not Roger, was her lover. Yoto was sorry and promised she would ever after obey God's commandments.

That evening found four lovers in the garden of Tangsu.

"Mercer, forgive me. I know now I love you."

Yoto and Roger strolled arm in arm to where Jacqueline and Mercer were scated, engaged in earnest conversation. Roger broke in to say:

"When will you be leaving Japan?"

Mercer replied, "On the next boat. That will be in two days. I am glad to invite you and Miss Yoto to attend our wedding in Tosha, tomorrow."

"We should be glad to witness your marriage, Mr. Chesterfield, but we came to ask a favor. Would you care to have a double wedding?"

"Why, you dear people! Congratulations!" exclaimed Jacqueline.

Two days had passed, the ocean liner had steamed out of the harbor of Japan with Mr. and Mrs. Mercer Chesterfield, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Kranstan, and Mr. C. L. Burns on board, sailing for America; and the heart of Yoto was full of joy and thankfulness at her escape from the dreaded marriage to Shima.

MARTHA SULLIVAN.

Pete and I were sitting before an oriental hotel leisurely smoking and talking. Dusk was fast falling, as we enjoyed the balmy and richly essenced air wafted to us from the flowery gardens of India.

"Pete, ever since that native mentioned the wishing-well, I have desired to visit it. Today, our ambassador confirmed the words of the native; consequently I have determined to see its wonders. As we have nothing particular to do, let us go to the wishing-well tonight."

At my companion's cheerful assent, we arose and strolled slowly down the verdurous path.

"Now all one has to do is to make a wish, and on the clear blue waters below will appear the answering vision."

"But, what shall we wish for?" asked Pete, looking at me inquiringly.

"I know," I exclaimed as I addressed the well, "O Mystic Well, let us see our school-life once again."

We looked eagerly into the well, as a misty vision grew steadily more and more distinct.

"Why, it's old Waite," burst out my companion. "Look, there is the Bowl,—but why are all those children swarming into the building?"

The date, September 17, 1916, appeared in response. Suddenly, a roomful of familiar faces appeared on the water below.

"It's 178," said Pete. "Look, there are Russell Webster and George Hunter in short trousers, with their diplomas in their hands. Don't they look cute?"

Near them, I saw Howard Nauts, sporting a red necktie, which his classmates were admiring. At the rear of the room I saw Lucretia Abbott spreading some newly acquired gossip by weird motions of her hand and emphatic nods of her head, to an interested group of listeners, among whom were Myrtle Sanzenbacher, Mildred Pasch, Florence Woods and Doris Nelson.

The next scene showed Mr. Pollock explaining some matter with untiring aftert. Then as the light dewned upon his listeners, those sented begin to some for pencils, while those along the walls betook themselves to other rooms.

Next we saw little Jack Davies and Robert Stitt, hand in hand, running about the crowded halls. Now and then, they would stop to compare the number of a room with that on a slip of paper and then in disgust they would harry on.

The scene changed. Now a class of physiology under Miss Gates was experimenting in the laboratory. Howard Transvein was vainly looking through a microscope, while his hand windered into the drawer to his supply of eardy. Seeing Theore Dur, in full to adjust her instrument, he proudly offered his services and then spent half an hour in fruitless work.

Another vision presented Mr. Gregg's algebra class. Sitting in the middle of the room was Horace Donegan, showing his new shell-rimined glasses to Leona Stockton and Martha Sullivan.

The next reflection indicated that a period of several months had passed. Along the third floor, groups had formed, showing one another their grade cards. At the girls' end of the hall could be seen Charlotte Meagher, surrounded by a questioning group, for she had received four "A's." At the boys' end stood Robert Maginnis, loudly condemning a certain teacher.

Our brilliantly lighted auditorium was the scene of the next three pictures. "The Vandeville Show" was now shown on the watery sheet. Although Freshmen, the performers possessed dramatic talent. Roy Milbourne, who was wearing the wig of a lowly negro upon his noble brow, was now entert uning us. His jokes were, evidently well appreciated, for Robert Babione and Robind Larkenkamp, who were sitting in the frant row, were in convulsions of laughter. The next vision displayed our great Baskethall Team, standing on the stage telling us how they would play at the Chicago tournament. The Roman Saturnalian Festival then appeared, a capacity audience could be seen. The I reshmen held their heads high for many of their classinates were in the play.

Each succeeding scene added to each Freshman's store of knowledge. Finally, June 17, 1917, appeared. Joy was now written on all Freshmen faces, for they were Freshmen no longer.

After the well had remained in darkness for a few moments, another vision appeared. It needed no explanation, for I remembered that day, as September 12, 1917. The lower hall was crowded with boys and garls walking about, arm in arm. There were no longer timid looks upon their faces. Indeed, some were bold anough to haze the I reshmen, for I saw a baretooted Freshman come down the stairs and go outside to find his shors, which had been dropped from the third floor.

In the following picture, I saw the Sophomores assembled in Room 64. Mr. Trivis, whom I remember as more willing to discuss a fellow's troubles with him than to give I in penalties, stood before them explaining something. The Sophomores went about their work systematically.

Suddenly, from below flashed a vision of the Service Flag, which I remember langing opposite the front door of Room 126. There were 185 stars in a field of white, representing both instructors and students who went as true patriots, giving their unselfish services to Uncle Sam. .

Several pictures followed in rapid succession, showing different rooms, where collections were being made, for the purpose of buying bonds and stamps to support the boys who had joined the colors.

The Auditorium was the scene next presented. The Waite Orchestra was playing while the entertainment, "The Bells of Corneville," was given very chaborately and entertainingly. Then followed the 'Trial by Jury, 'also very well given.

Another group of pictures appeared, in which I saw many girls knitting for the Red Cross. Some girls knitted even while walking about the halls. The fad, evidently, had attracted James Feak, for I saw his picture on the sheet below, endeavoring to wield the needles properly.

Another scene presented our High School Cadets. I saw Charles Charvat intently looking at the test, as he walked, trying to decide which was his right foot. Near him stood Jack Williams regarding his unfortunate companion with mischievous delight.

The last scene was in Room 126. As I looked over the perspiring roomful of students taking their examinations, I laughed, as I recalled my own troubles

Following closely the Sophomore year came the Junior. I saw the boys and girls assembled in Room 126 under Mr. Mathias. But no sooner was the class organized, then it was dismissed, on account of an epidemic of the influenza.

The following picture indicated that a month had elapsed before school had again commenced.

The next vision recalled most vivid memories. It was at Swayne Field; the bleachers were a mass of waving colors. People had come to see Waite win from Scott at last. But again, they were doomed to disappointment, for the element of luck entered the game and Scott won.

Then came a gay scene. It was the "J" hop at the Woman's Building The hall was decorated with the allied war colors.

Several pictures in the auditorium displayed first, the Swiss Bell Ringers, and secondly, the play, "The Princess of Kamakura." In the latter, I saw I that Wiles, Constance Wegman and Bernice Williams, members of the Junior Class, who displayed remarkable talent.

Next I saw Mr. Pollock sitting in the principal's chair. Mr. Gayman, after many years of well-accomplished and well-appreciated work, had resigned to take a position at the Toledo Computing Scale Co. Mr. Pollock was appointed to take his place, to the great delight of all at Waite.

A series of pictures now followed, in which was shown the well-planned entertainment for our soldier boys.

Our Campus was now displayed. The entire school was assembled there, while Mr. Van Cleve planted trees in memory of George Fisher, Walter Goorley and Lieutenant Roosevelt.

The final scenes showed the students holding celebrations, for, due to the epidemic, the examinations were eliminated.

Without delay, visions of the Senior year appeared below, signifying, no doubt, that the well wished to complete its long, yet pleasurable task. The scene below now displayed a finished product in those who had survived from the green, untrimmed crowd of four years previous. As we gazed, I saw some sights which interested me greatly. I saw Benj. Kievit puzzling his well-ordered mind, trying to solve the eternal feminine. He had grown from a mere stripling to a well-kint young man. Next I saw (lyde Kiker establishing has reputation as an authority on the United States Postoffice System before in interested (?) crowd.

The stands of the Scott field were packed and masses of gay colors were streaming everywhere. Waite and Scott were again at their annual fray. What a battle it was! Waite, rising from defeat, their hearts coursing with awakened hope, fought like tigers. Time and time again, the masses of colors swayed, as Colvin tried for the last time by his crashing tackles, to stop Scott. But all was of no avail. Dame Fortune smiled again on Scott; and Waite, proud of her team and its spirit, accepted her fate, and looked once more toward the fature.

A cherished remembrance was recalled by the next picture. I was sitting in the English VIII class, behind the pupil in question, whose mind at that moment was fir from the class room. Suddenly his dreams were rudely broken,

"Edward, what's the reference of the passage, 'Loaves and Fishes?' " asked Miss Dunlap.

Lamb scratching his head replied, "It has reference to the 'Last Supper.' "

"Oh, Edward," exclaimed Miss Dunlap, sinking back as if thunderstruck. "Whoever heard of such a thing?"

Ever after, Edward was regarded as an authority on the Bible.

As I looked at the next picture, I thought I was in a theatre on Broadway, but on closer observation I recognized our anditorium. On the stage were actors chiefly of the Semor Class, enacting the sacred drama. The Appeal to Caesar. Among the most talented, I recognized students who had taken part in previous entertainments; but, now, what a change. The contrast was beyond words. Two successive performances were given, on April 16 and 17. The entertainment was one of the best given at Waite, and, I recalled, that its success was due to the untiring work of Mr. Van Deusen.

The Senior prom was presented next. The Woman's Building, beautifully decorated, was the place of enjoyment.

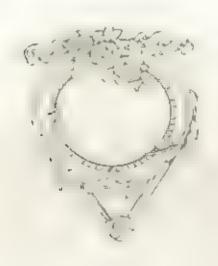

On three successive class days, standing at the library window, I had watched that boat go down the river and now, I was to go as a member of the Senior class. All hearts gave way to pleasure for soon we were to part and school days would be no more. Oh, what a day we made of it!

The next vision and the last, was one that I have often recalled. Seated in the front rows, we listened to the addresses which brought forth common thoughts to all the seniors. We were soon to start out sorrowing to leave, yet glid to go to perform the tasks laid out by the Almighty. Within a few years we should be scattered broadcast but each one of the class of 1920 would forever be under the watchful eye of our Alma Mater.

As the surface of the well darkened and became empty of figures, I looked at Pete, whom I had forgotten. He smiled back at me and said in a husky voice, "I wish we could live those years over again."

"I, too," I replied.

President's Farewell Address

Teachers and Classmates:

C700000000000000000

Is it not fitting to ponder a moment before we pass into the world outside? For some, graduation marks the end of an educational career; for others, it is but the end of the preparation for higher education. For all of us, however, it is the close of an important chapter in our lives. The splendid co-operation of the class, the faculty, and the entire student body has made it a most pleasant chapter. It is not the end of our story; June the seventeenth but marks the "commencement" of a greater, broader life.

In taking farewell of our instructors who have faithfully accompanied us, it is only fitting that we give to them our thanks. With mere words, we cannot show our true appreciation of their devotion, and we take leave of them with sincere wishes for their future happiness and welfare.

Now, as never before, the world recognizes the value of the well-trained man and woman. The day has arrived when the worth of the man is not based upon his dollars, but upon his value as a man. Is he giving his best to humanity? Does he appreciate the greater things of life? Does he know his fellow-men and love them? The man at a premium is not he who lives for himself, with selfish, narrow vision; but it is he who works for his fellows and lives for them, giving each day his best and tullest that he may the better serve his stewardship here. Thus do we see him grow in spirit, until the noble and true are his enjoyment and his life. An intimate acquaintance with nature, science, the lives of great men and women, and the fine arts as well as with the practical business of every day life, "maketh him a full man." When this type of man is in such great demand, can we rightfully ignore Duty, or do a 19ht but prepare ourselves for the tasks that confront us?

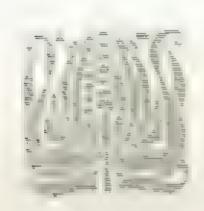

We must recognize that we shall each of us, soon become an integral part in the community in which we live. Inseparable with the privileges which will be granted to each of us, must come the duty and sacrifice. In the secluded academic life there is not always the opportunity to take part in the secular affairs. We should, however, observe with that impartiality, which ought to characterize us throughout life, the business of the work-a-day world. Not in our experience, or the lack of it, shall we find our inspiration, but in the chromeles of our fore fathers. We are proud of our nation's record, and of its ideals.

Truly, my dear classmates, we must help to carry on that clear-thinking, strong manhood of which our country has long been so proud. It was such an ideal, such a hope, and such faith that took Americans across the sea to hattle. There is now the pleasure of accomplishment which comes with the knowledge that the world has rid itself, in large measure, of that autocratic, despotic power which so ight to dominate the world. That part of the work has been done; it remains for us to cherish those noble ideals, to preserve which countless lives have been given.

Let us adapt our class motto to our lives, believing always, that with the knowledge of the world, a greater knowledge of trath is made possible. As the curtain rings down upon the activities of the class of nineteen-hundred and twenty, let a solemn prayer go up from our thankful hearts. We have fought a good fight, we now come where we may well say. Farewell, to the Morrison R Waite High School.

EDWARD LAMB.

Where great thick volumes lie around

And weighty reference books are found,

There all is cheery, bright and day.

Forum Review

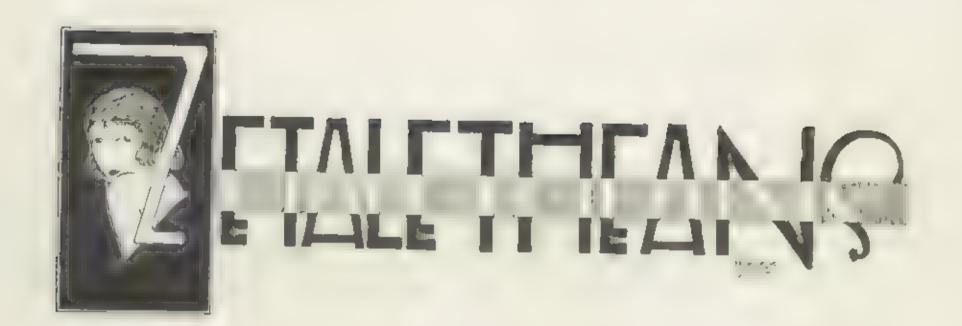

The Forum is a proud leader in all of the prominent affairs of school life, and has been since the time of its organization in the year 1905 at Fast Side Central High School. In this year with the assistance of Professor Rex Wells, eighteen boys organized the society. Here it continued until the building ceased to be used for high school purposes. It was then transferred to old Central High School for a brief period, after which it found its perminent home in the new Waite building, which was completed in 1913.

Through these fifteen years, the society has had an honorable career, prospering beyond the expectation of the most sungiane. There have been times of deteat as well as times of triumph, but of these there is no complaint. The aim has been to develop fellowship and leadership, which purpose has been accomplished to a satisfactory degree. An inspection of the class officers, of the phished to a satisfactory degree. An inspection of the class officers, of the Refin and Armal Boards, of the affletic leaders and of other prominent characters will reveal the fact that the majority of them are loyal members of the Forum.

In the year which is drawing to a close, the Forum Las munitimed pist standards. Splendad programs on Aliska, Burbank and Pershing, Australia, Ireland and Music have been given. The joint meetings and debates will, Zetalethean and Quill and Dalger's nactus have been pleasure and profitable. The Forum also promalgated and assisted in presenting the drama "The Appeal to Caesar. This was a notable occasion and displayed a splendad spirit of cooperation as did also the formation of an All Waite Debating Team." The Forum also has established other precidents for the year in participating in a joint meeting and in a diage with the Websters of Scott. These events were both enjoyable occasions, showing that the Tatchet can be buried, when racessary. This dance, held at the close of the year, was the climax of the Waite social affairs. East but not least, Forumites will long remember the barquet which was held early in Jone to commemorate the close of a successful year.

The following toast could be proposed:

"Here's to the society we all love well. May she continue to perform her duty in years to come as well as in the past, training leaders, who can move the masses with logic and cumming arguments, yielding a lasting influence for all that is noblest, for all that is best and making for a higher citizenship, a sater and happier America.

Zetalethean History

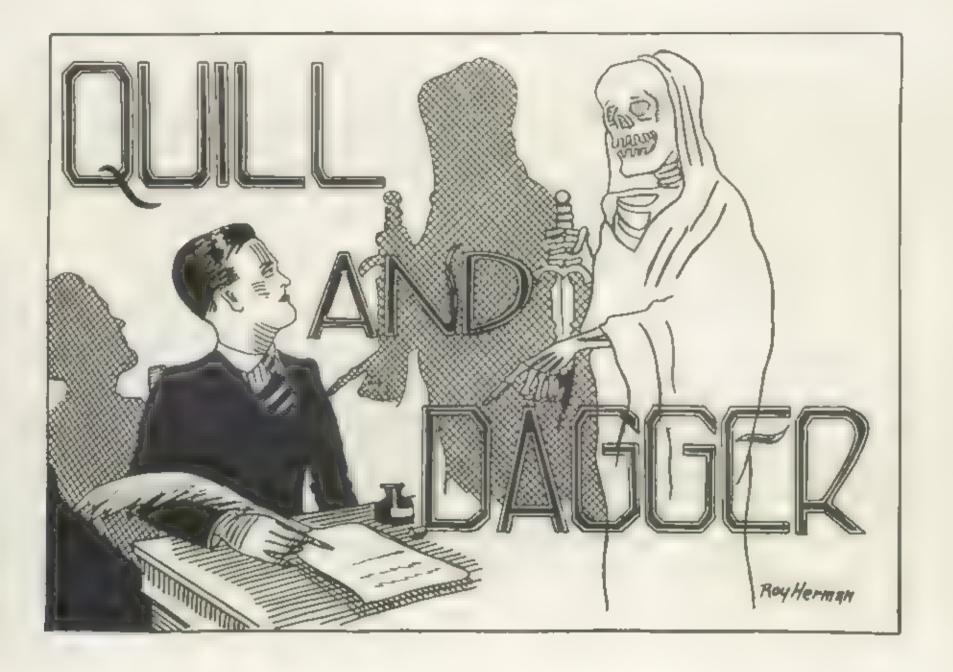

Just seventeen years ago the Zetalethean Literary Society was founded. But it was quite a different society from what it is now. Miss Grace Gibson and eight young girls from the East Side Central School banded together for the purpose of becoming better acquainted with literature, music, and art. They called themselves the Margaret Fuller Society.

In the course of a few years the society was moved to Central High School and finally to Waite, where the name was changed to the Zetalethean Literary Society.

And now we have many things to be proud of in our society. First of all, think of our members' Many of them have helped to make this annual what it is, and others are members of the Retma board, heads of the various departments, members of the Carls' Basketball team and, furthermore, our Vice-President is Secretary of the Senior Class.

We have not only derived such benefits as better knowledge of oratory, debating, and current events, but our members have enjoyed more and better social times than ever before. We have had our usual spreads and informal dances, and also holiday parties, and theater parties. In addition to these there are three annual functions: The dance of the four Literary Societies, the farewell party to the Semons, and the banquet given at the close of the year, which is attended by all the members and critics.

Altogether this year has been one of the most successful in the history of the Zetaletheans.

The Quill and Dagger Literary Society

The Quill and Dagger Literary Society is a society of the boys, for the members, and by the students of Waite High School. The Q & D is the emblem of Friendship, Fraterity, Endeavor and Achievement. It is composed of conscientious members who are giving their best for Waite on the football and basketball field, in dramatics, in orations, in literary work and music. The aggressive students of 1914 gave it the constitution and by-laws that have proven the foundation of its strength and achievement. The members of the society have conducted the activities with so much spirit and enthusiasm that success has been the crown of their efforts.

Over thirty three per cent of its members are letter men in either football or basketball. It has placed its quota on the debating team, on the Abnual and Retina Board, and in all other organizations. Since in amendment to the constitution permits the society a membership of forty it has increased its membership to the number permitted. The new members leave been recrinted largely from the lower classmen to insure a quorum of active members at all times to conduct the society in such a way that it will be a benefit to its members collectively and individually.

The Annual Dance given at the Woman's Building on March 31 was a triumph in social activities. It was a good demonstration of Quill and Dagger enthusiasm and unity of endeavor. A feeling of gaicty and care-free merriment predominated everywhere.

The Annual Banquet is always one of the greatest meetings of the Q & D because it brings to the surface the feeling of respect, fraternity, and of mutual assistance that exists among the members. It is a manifestation of the clean sportsman like way in which all the activities of the society are carried out.

The regular weekly meetings of the society have been conducted in such a way as to give the members a clear conception of parliamentary procedure and laws. Music, orations, debates, literary compositions, and comics have been among the numbers given on the programs from time to time. But to measure the capacity of the Quill and Dagger Literary Society, make a survey of its achievements and it is quite certain that everyone will agree that it is one of the greatest institutions of Waite High School.

Periclean Literary Society

It is not necessary to give the previous history of such an old, well-known club as the Perielean Literary Society. For over nineteen years this society has been in existence in Toledo schools. There are now two chapters, the Alpha and Beta chapters of Scott and Waite respectively.

Although the name indicates that this is a study club, this is not entirely true. I ach year besides the joint luncheon at the Woman's Club with the Scott Pericleans, trere are spreads, theater parties, an annual dance and a yearly excursion to Sugar Island.

Aside from these pleasures, the regular meetings held every other Uniday are both entertaining and educational. The subjects are arranged by our cersor, earned out by our members and corrected by a competent staff of critics chosen from the faculty. A type of program especially popular reads as follows:

The Hi-Y Club

The school year '19-'20 has been one of phenomenal growth and unparalleled success for the Waite Hi-Y Cab. At the beginning of the year we adopted for our slogin, "Don't wint for a personal invitation," and we have grown from a club of but twenty eight to one of one hundred and two live, active members.

We have held our meetings at 7:30 o clock every other Saturday evening at the Y. M. C. A., under the supervision of Mr. Warr of the Boys' Division.

The program committee, leaded by J. Max Shepherst, arranged a great many excellent programs, and the social committee, under Samuel Lynn, saw that refreshments were a part of each meeting.

The club had a meeting during the vacation at the country home of George Booth. Nearly every member was present and all had a good time. At the first meeting after school started Coach Rupp talked to the club. Among other speakers who talked to us during the year are: Prof. Rev. W. Wells, Rev. S. K. Mahon, Mr. Mark Winchester, Mr. Nevin O. Winter, Principal Pollock of Waite, Principal Williams of Woodward, Mr. Reiman of the U. of Mand Mr. Riggs of the Toledo Bridge and Crane Company.

The Club also enjoyed a hike, a boxing tourney and two great banquets.

The Hi-Y Club is now, undisputably the largest, livest organization in Waite Hi and will undoubtedly continue to be so next year, and those that follow.

Aloha Literary Society

Upon the entry of the Freshmen Class of 1920 into Waite High, a group of progressive girls decided to organize a Freshmen Literary Society. All girls who had an average of B" in English were eligible for membership. With the aid of Miss Collins they soon succeeded in their enterprise. The member ship was left open for about six weeks, so that all girls desaring to enroll might be given this opportunity.

At the second meeting the name Aloha was adopted and the constitution was drawn up.

The first semester was spent in procuring members and preparing for the second semester. The general topics of the meetings have been the study of the most prominent American authors. Among those who have been discussed are: Irving, Hawthorne, Kipling, Harriet Beecher Stowe, O. Henry and Poe, which have been criticized by Miss Waite, Miss Nelson and Miss Kimble.

The colors, Green and Gold were selected: the first because of its relation to the Freshmen, the second taken from the school colors. The purs and motto "Interest Freshmen in Waite; Interest Waite in the Freshmen" are very suitable.

Our policy has not been all work, for we believe in the old saying, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Therefore in addition we have enjoyed many social events, such as parties, luncheons and spreads

We do not expect to do as much as we would like to during our Freshmen year. By the time we are seniors we hope that the Treshmen Society of 1923 will be able to complete with other organizations. Will Waite High School help us to carry out our motto?

The Waite Friendship Club

Of all the years in the history of the Friendship (Inb the past year has been the most successful. The membership is nearly twice as large as ever before. This great increase is due, perhaps, to the splendid ability of the president, Edythe Bumgardner.

Miss Brown carried on the Bible study this year by a series of short talks on the Old Testament. Miss Neville gave a talk on health, and Miss Pray gave a very interesting talk on the Passion Play. Miss Goodall and Mrs. Rynder gave talks on social and welfare work.

The girls of the club made some very clever scrap-books for the children in the hospital, and a delightful Christmas party was given for the Girl Reserves of Burnungham School to show them a real American good time

The Friendship Club entertained the Hi Y Club at the Y. W. C. A. on April 10. The party was a splendid success and everyone present had a very delightful evening. Numerous other parties, hikes, and roller skating made up the social affairs of the year.

The Waite High Girl Scouts

The Waite High Girl Scouts, Troop 38, were organized last October by Mrs. L. C. Jackson, local director.

The officers are Amy Mills, leader of Patrol I; Myrtle Furman, leader of Patrol II and Helen Ewing, leader of Patrol III. Mary Witherell is scribe, Miss Jeanette Collins, captain, and Miss Laura Pafenbach, lieutenant.

On Saturday, February 28, the troop presented the play "A Good Scout," in the auditorium of the Lasalle & Koch building. This play was written for the Waite girls by Miss Constance Mackaye, the well-known authoress of Boston.

Mabel Swinehart of Patrol II, won first prize in the essay contest, conducted by the Toledo Commerce Club for boy and girl scouts.

The scout motto is "Be Prepared." Their promise is: "On my honor I will try to do my duty to God and my country; to help other people at all times and to obey the Scout laws.

The English VIII Club

The highsh VIII Classes have again organized into a club consisting of the Alpha, Beta and Gamma chapters. The meetings are held every other Friday by the respective classes. The programs are similar to those of the literary societies, Miss Dunlap as censor, assigning the subjects.

Each Chapter has its own officers; but unlike the usual practice, the offices of president, vice president and secretary are rotary, that of the treasurer, only, being permanent. This method gives an opportunity to a great number of students to learn how to preside over a bedy and how to record the minutes of a meeting.

Dues are collected at each meeting, and, at the end of the year, the money will be used for some worthy purpose. Two years ago the amount thus obtained was given to the work of the Red Cross in Toledo. The sum collected last year is still unused, but it was hoped it might be applied toward some memorial of the service rendered in the World War, by the boys of Morrison R. Waite High School. The organization is enthusiastically supported by all. This club work is helpful, also, in that it accustoms the members to speak at ease in public

Waite Tennis Club

A new sport looms up on the athletic horizon of Waite as the construction of four tennis courts progresses. A tennis club was organized in March for the promotion of tennis in the high schools and to develop teams to participate in the local and state tournaments. Tennis is without doubt one of the best names of which a high school can boast, as it gives the girls and boys an equal change to participate. The club was organized on the fruit hope of having four courts built on the Waite campus. An appropriation was made by the Board of Education for the erection of backstops and other equipment. Tennis, like other sports, will come under the control of the Athletic Association and will be encouraged as a part of the regular athletic program of Waite.

E =

Debating Team

In the early part of the second semester a series of debates were held to select an all Waite debating team. I our teams were selected from the four literary societies and were matched to determine the ability of the prospective candidates for the all Waite team. After the series of debates were finished the five judges met and east votes for the five debaters that they considered the best of the twelve that took part. Those selected were Abraham Smith, Myrtle Sanzenbacher, Clyde Kiker, Charlotte Meagher and Edward I imb. The team might be considered mythical, as they were never given a chance to show their skill outside of school.

"The Appeal to Caesar"

One of the notable events of the year was the play given by the four literary societies, on the nights of the sixteenth and seventeenth of April. The "Appeal to Caesar" was a story of the Apostle Paul's trial before Nero. The life and customs of the time were well portrayed by the cast of about seventy five students, under the direction of Mr. John G. Van Deusen. The part of Nero was played with exceptional talent by Loyal Notziger. That of Paul was played by Roy Milbourne with great saccess. A teature of the play was an Lgyptian dance by Myrtle Sanzenbacher, also another dance given by Constance Wegman and Isabel Walters. The entertainment displayed dramatic talent and will probably create a greater interest in school plays.

Hygiene and Home Nursing

Home nursing is applied hygiene and physiology. One-half of the time is given to practical work, demonstrations and proceedure in home care of the sick.

It is instruction in how to take care of children, how to assist the doctor and trained nurse, how to prevent disease in the home, and so help establish high standards of health in the home and community.

The chief aim of this course is to teach girls how to handle the common problems relating to care of the body, and social relationships of life, so that they will be fitted to take charge of a home.

This course is not strictly vocational in the sense that it bads directly to employment, although one object is to train girls to appreciate the necessity of education, so that they will be more capable of choosing a vocation.

The course is open to Junior and Senior girls with full credits.

Let us stup for a marate before entering affletics to pay our respect and trabate to the main that has woven as way into the nearts of the men on the field and trae students by his association with them. Mr. Fred W. Klag, Faculty Manager

On the faculty manager of a school rests the success or failure of athletics. It makes little difference what kind of material the coach has to work on or what kind of coach the team may have as a leader, if athletics are a failure financially it is impossible for a team to succeed. To pay the expense of athletics costs thousands of dollars each year, which must come from the proceeds of the games. When Mr. Klag took charge of the Athletic Association it had a deficit that had been developed during the war and influenza epidemie of the past seasons. When the season opened several hundred dollars were spent for new uniforms and other equipment which increased the debt of the Association. But the end of the athletic year of nineteen hundred and twenty found the Athletic Association with a surplus fund to start the season most year This success is due to the efficient management of the faculty manager. Mr. Klag has made every possible effort to make the year in athletics a success, and as far as it is in his power it has been successful. He has not only been a proficient manager, but a true friend to everyone with whom he has been associated, in the class room as well as on the athletic field. It can be truly said that Mr. Klag is a prince among men.

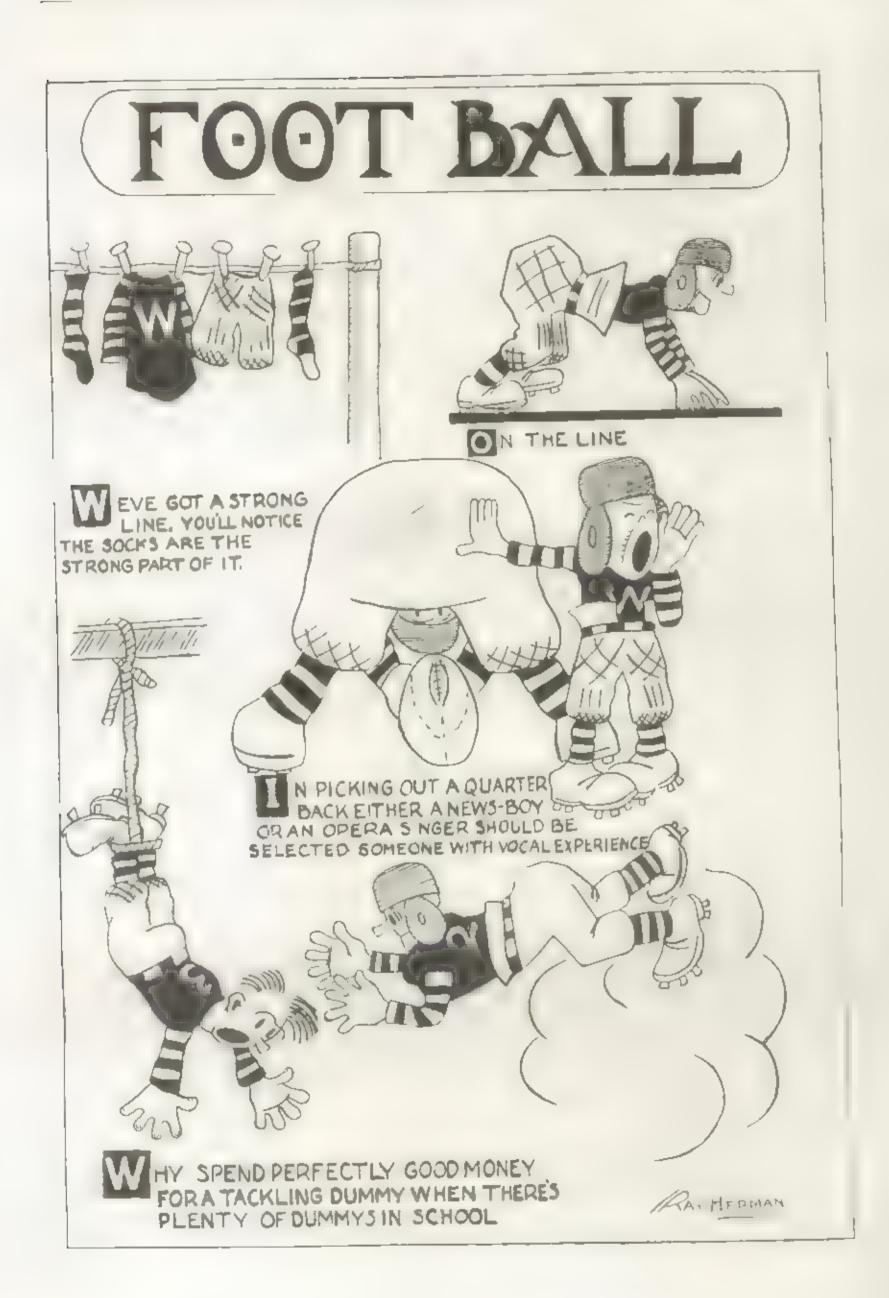

The Year in Athletics

It matters little what the pessimist may say, it is an established fact that athleties are taking a more prominent part in the logh schools over the country every year. Today in institution, no matter what its academic standing may be, is known by the athletic teams it develops. Whether that team was or loses matters little so long as they play hard and appeared the school they represent will be looked upon with pride and respect. When we look at the record of the teams that have carried our banner into the athletic contests this season we can but feel proud of them. It is true that this may not be the most successful year that Waite has ever had if we take only the scores into consideration, yet without doubt the football team that opposed our worthy opposents on Thanksgiving Day was the strongest team that Waite has ever put on the field. In spite of the few losses that the team suffered in football, we consider the season a success. We feel safe in saying that the team at no time lost to a team its superior in football tactics.

The basketball season was less successful than the football season so far as the number of games won were concerned, but this cannot be said in respect to its spirit, fight, and enthusiasm.

So far we have had no chance to see the track team in action, but we are looking forward to the success and exhibition of the true sportsmanship that we are sare will crown the efforts of the Waite boys who are giving their best for their school in this sport.

The tennis team that has been practicing for some time may be able to establish a new record for Warte in a new sport. Let us hope that in the future tennis will be one of the clacif sports of the school in which everyone has a chance to participate.

CAMP STORER

The Season

The 1919 football season opened when Coach Rupp called the squad together about the first of May for spring practice. The May and June work out was more of a calisthenic nature than practice for the gridiron. The season proper began when the squad of fitty eight men left for Camp Storer for two weeks of real training. Two weeks of strenuous exercise and close association brought the team closer together than could be expected from practice on home ground. The squad returned from Camp Storer on September 5th and started football in earnest under the direction of Coach Rupp, Courtney and Ray Sheets. While we may not consider the season as good as the preceding one, we are convinced that Waite had one of the best teams in the middle west and one that we can well be proud of. When we think that Waite ran up a score of 206 points against 69 of their opponents, we are fully convinced that the defeats Waite suffered were the results of all look rather than any we also of the team.

The first game of the season was played on Swayne Field, September 27, with Bellevue High School. Although the field was as strange to the Waite men as it was to the Bellevue men, the visitors came out at the negative end of a 66 to 7 score. All the Waite men seemed to be in fine shape for the game and all did fine work, which filled the Waite enthusiasts with glee.

One week after the game with Bellevue came the crushing defeat from which the Waite squad never fully recovered. The game with Detroit North western was the roughest game of the season, played in the sweltering heat on Goldberg Field of Detroit. Quinlin and Cassady were injured early in the game, causing the Waite team to weaken before the continual string of fresh men sent in by Detroit Northwestern. The game ended with a score of 19 to 6.

Waite had two weeks of practice between the game with Detroit North-western and Cass Technical of Detroit, which was played on Swayne Field October 18, Waite winning with a score of 66 to 6. Scoring started early in the game and did not stop until the game was over. It was in the game with Cass Tech that Capt on Cassidy gave the tank a real thrill when he caught the ball on the kickoff and ran eighty yards for a touchdown.

The Bryan team that played Waite on October 25 was equal in weight but lacked the speed and training of the Waite squad. It seemed in the first quarter that the game was going to be an exhibition of real tootball, as neither team made any decisive gams. The second quarter, however, told a different story, for the Waite squad netted four touchdowns. Bryan scored a touchdown in the third quarter following a pass. The Waite squad came out at the big end of a 35 to 6 score.

Like the War of the Roses, the game with Cleveland Lakewood on Swayne Field. November 1, was a battle in the mud. Being covered with mud, it was almost impossible for the teams to detect their own men. Tackling was almost impossible, as the men were so covered with mud that it was impossible to hold to them. The Waite men were the muddlest, however, for the game resulted in a score of 32 to 13 in Waite's favor.

THE LINEUP

WAITE FINISHING AN END RUN WAITE-SCOTT GAME

The game with Detroit Northern was the hardest game of the season to lose. The team did not know until the afternoon of the game whether Captain Cassidy or Halthack Simpson would be on the field, as both had been ill with severe colds. In spite of their colds, both men were in the game. Little can be said about the Northern game except that it was one of the best exhibitions of clean sportsmanship ever exhibited on Swiyne Field. Final score, 12 to 7.

The game with Ann Arbor was the climax of football in Waite. When we think of what occurred in Ann Arbor on November 15, we are inclined to smile and ask what the score was. With six of the regulars out of the game, the Waite team was defeated by a score of 19 to 7. The Ann Arbor game was the rough-house game of the season, the game in which the rules of football were suspended and hurdling and holding were in vogue. Everyone had a chance to be kicked in the ribs or penalized five yards. Such a game will probably not occur again soon.

Contrary to the opinion of the public at large, the Waite team carried the Purple and Gold on Scott Lield. Thanksgiving Day, confident of victory. It is true that Waite had saffered defeats that could not be accounted for, nevertheless they telt themselves equal to the team that they were going to meet, and in the snow and mud they proved themselves equal; not only equal but superior to their adversaries. The number of first downs made by the Waite team almost doubled that made by Scott. The clean, cool be ided punting of the man that will lead the Waite team to victory this fall has no precedent. Every unit of the great football machine that it had taken a whole season to develop was in perfect working condition, every man was fit, every player was anyous to play, and the entire team was confident as to the outcome. Waite did not won, but thousands of spectators that crowded the grandstands and field left Scott Field with a feeling of respect and a limitation for the team that could fight and throughout the game showed such clean cut sportsmanship. Next season we are expecting a stronger adversary than this year, but we teel confident that Waite will rise to the occasion and end for some time the string of Scott victories.

It is scarcely fair to pass from the football review without mentioning the heroic efforts and fidelity of the reserve squad. The strength of the varsity to an depends on the opposition furnished by the reserve team. When the games that were scheduled for the reserve squad were cancelled, they took it in a sportsmuchke way, ready to make any sacrifice that the varsity might win. The only game played by the reserve squad this season resulted in a score of 59 to 0. The game was played with Genoa High School. It was the only game played by a Waite team this year in which the opponents were not permitted to score.

Already the plans for the fall training have been formulated, which is a good indication that the Waite team next season will be one of the best. It is true that Waite loses some of her best men, but the new spirit that animates the team will more than balance the loss of the men who graduate this spring. The team will be some lighter, but faster than the team that represented Waite last season. Because of the new system of open playing, speed is of more value than weight.

Schultz

"Joe" held the position as left halfback on the team last fall. When called on to carry the ball through the line Joe always responded readily and was generally successful. Without a doubt Schultz is one of the best punters on the grid. Much of the success of the Thanksgiving Day game was due to his cool head and accurate punting. Joe is captain-elect of the team for next year.

Hill

"Howdy," though the smallest man in the backfield, was, nevertheless, one of the most important players last season. As quarterback Howdy exhibited rare judgment in selecting the right play at the right time. As everyone knows, the general of a football team has more responsibility than any other player on the team. Running back punts is one of the difficult jobs that falls to a quarterback. We expect to see Hill on the team again next year.

Colvin

"Herb," alternate captain, proved himself one of the greatest ends that Toledo High Schools have ever produced. His speed enabled him to get down under punts and passes and to down his opponents before they were able to get under way. On the defense Cupid was a genius in breaking up end runs and short forward passes. Herb is one of the few four-letter men who will be lost by graduation this year. We expect to hear of Colvin in college football in the near future.

Petcoff

"Boni," the heavyweight of the team, played at right tackle. The big boy's weight and strength enabled him to break through the line and down his opponents behind their own line, thus gaining many yards for the Waite team. When given the ball, Petcoff could leave the field a wreck with his stiff arm. Boni's career as High School football player comes to an end this year, but we extend to him our best wishes for a success in college football.

Alexander

"Alex," another heavyweight, held a guard position. Alexander made his letter in his Freshman year, which is proof of his ability as a football player. The guard position is no easy place to play, as it requires unlimited strength and endurance, which were two of Alexander's assets. Dodge will be on the grid again this fall.

Quinlin

"Pete" was the pivot man in the grid machine who could snap back a spiral ball as straight as a bullet. In the hottest of the battle Quinlin's voice could be heard encouraging the team and putting pep into the plays. Quinlin, who has been a member of the squad for several seasons, is a valuable man whom we regret losing very much. He will graduate this year.

Pelton

"Jerry" was the lad who played the other guard position. Although a new man at the game, he proved himself one of the best guards Waite has developed for some time. When Pelton joined the squad last season his knowledge of football was somewhat limited, but by conscientious endeavor and faithful training he developed into a player that could be depended on at all times. Pelton will be in the Waite camp again next season.

Barrett

"Clif," who joined the squad after being discharged from the army, proved to be the man needed to fill the left tackle position. Playing opposite to Petcoff balanced the Waite line until it was almost impossible to penetrate it. This was the first year that Barrett appeared on the Waite varsity squad. Clif was one of the men who not only gave their best to the service of the country, but also to the Purple and Gold. Barrett will be back next year.

Gregg

"Leo," like Barrett, was one of the men who came from one service to join another. Gregg joined the squad at Camp Storer but did not begin to play at end until the team began practice on home ground. Owing to the fact that Gregg was a fast man he made an excellent mate for Colvin and greatly assisted in the development of the forward passing game, as well as breaking up plays while on the defense. Gregg will not likely be with the squad next year.

Trautwein

"Hodge" was the lad who intercepted a forward pass and ran ninety yards for a touchdown. Trautwein played halfback or end with equal proficiency. He is one of those who have earned a place on the team by constant and faithful training. At recovering punts he was hard to beat and it was this little act of kindness that accounted for one of the touchdowns scored by the Waite team last season. Trautwein graduates in June.

Buck

"Buck" took his exercise at the pivot position on the grid last season. As a roving center Buck was a genius, breaking up forward passes over the line was his hobby. When it was necessary for him to be placed in the backfield he could hit the line hard, as was shown in the Bryan game. Buck will not be on the Waite grid machine this fall.

Benson

"Andy" was one of the men whose merit was not discovered until the season was well under way. Benson goes at everything in the same determined way that he goes at football. His devotion to duty and constant fighting earned him a "W." We are expecting to see Benson on the team next season with the same old fighting spirit that animated him this year

Demuth

Demuth" was the long boy who could go higher in the air without leaving his feet than any other man on the team. Without a doubt he was the fastest man on the team. Demuth suffered injuries early in the season that prevented him from contributing his full value to the team. Demuth was one of the January graduates.

Kiker

"Kike" is a kind of an athlete that a coach likes to work with. When he came out for the team the student body and players laughed at the idea of him trying to play football. But those who laugh last laugh best, and some who did the laughing were shown up by Kiker. The school will miss Clyde when he leaves, because he is always working for our interests. If more of the students would follow his example along this line the athletics here would be raised higher.

-Coach Rupp.

Farrel

"Fud" is the fastest, squirmiest, pluckiest little quarterback that Waite is likely to develop for some time. Despite the injuries that he received early in the season, Farrel was one of the mainstays of the team. At running back punts Fud is a demon, as he demonstrated in the Bryan game last fall. In all probability Farrel will be the 1920 quarterback.

Meyers

Meyers is the boy with the educated toe, who can drive the old pigskin through the goalposts from any angle. Although Meyers is light, he is one of the fastest, most dependable halfbacks that will don the Purple and Gold socks this fall, as the team will depend on speed rather than size.

Pauley

Frank is another of the beef trusts of the line. Owing to his weight he will be a very valuable man to the Waite line next season Everyone that knows football knows that the guard position is one that requires strength and endurance. A glance at the picture will convince you that Pauley has both.

Domhoff

Vick is another halfback who was handicapped throughout the season with injuries. Domhoff tore a ligament of the ankle in the earlier part of the season. However, this did not keep him from participating in the games. We expect to see Domhoff in the lineup again next fall.

Kinker

Bud is the little fellow who tore gaps in the line in the Cleveland Lakewood game at Swayne Field last season. Although this was Kinker's first year on the Purple and Gold squad, he made a fine record. Bud will be on the eleven again next season if he shows the same fight and ability that he demonstrated last fall.

Brenot

Brenot was another amateur at the rough and tumble game who made good by a little grit and stick to the game. He is already a good football player and we feel assured that if Brenot is in the Waite camp next season he will be on the regular lineup.

J. Max Shepherst, Student Manager

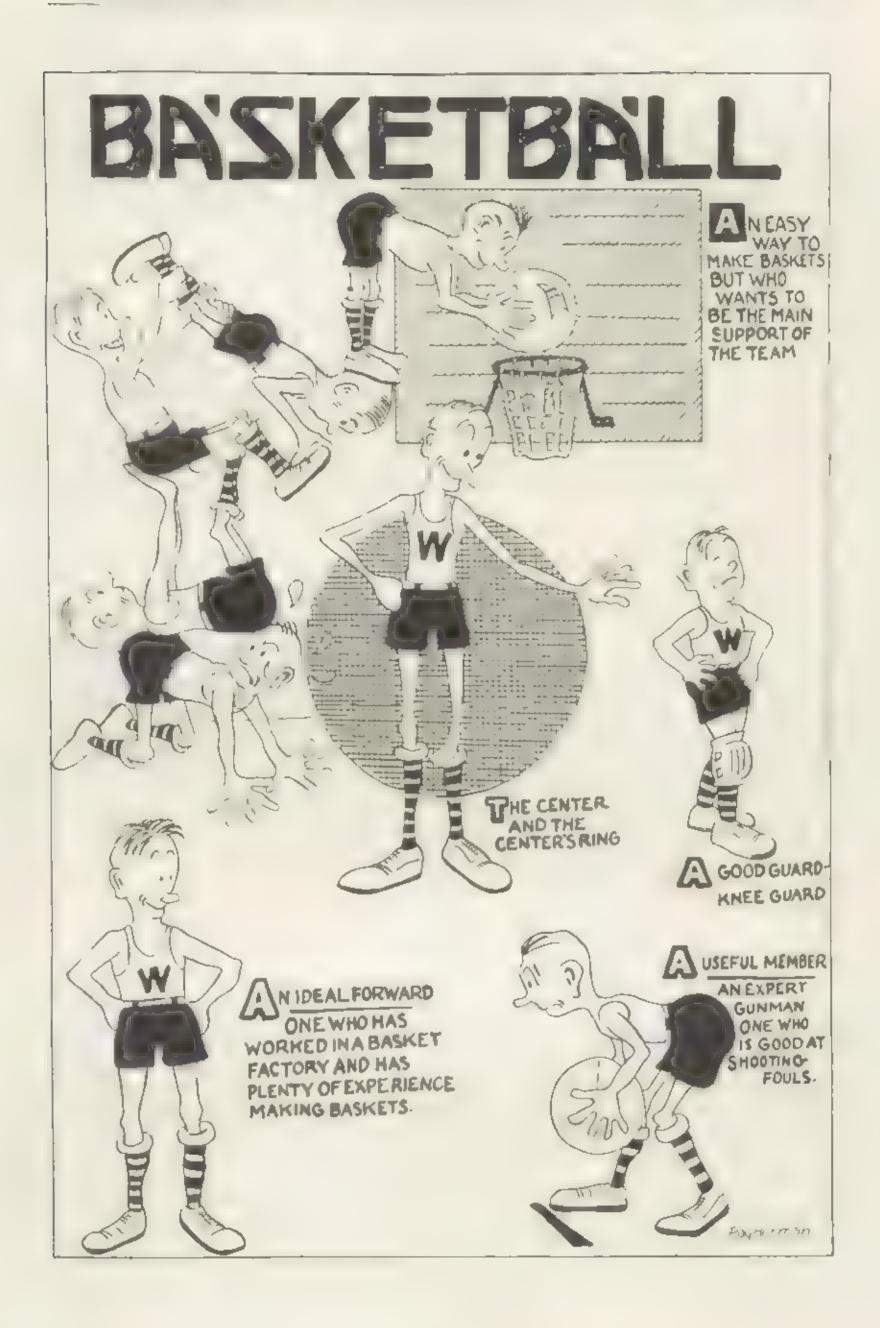

We owe a debt of gratitude to the man who acted as student-manager for the Waite football and basketball teams this season. When the football team returned from Camp Storer, Mich, there was one thing that the team needed seriously and that was a student manager, to take care of their suits and supplies. After a circfal research, Max was selected to fill the position. We can feel assured that if we always have as competent a man as Max to fill this position the men on the field will have the best of care.

Cassidy

When he was given the ball. Cass do never tailed to make gives through the line or around end. Walt was just as good on the defense as on the offense, as was demonstrate in the Wate Scott game. We regret that Cass do will not be with us this fall, as this was his fourth year on the gridiron.

Simpson

"Jimmy" was the star halfback who was frequently called on to plough tooles through the opponents line. His ability to dodge and wird off tacklers enabled him to make gains where others tailed. Missing a pass was a thing that Jimmy was never guilty of . In all phases of the game Simpson was one of the most proficient men of the team. The sheepskin took Simpson.

The Season

The basketball season of 1920 can scarcely be termed a success, but how many of us ever stop to think that our athletic teams are just what we make them, that they are composed of the student body, chosen out of the student body, and are playing for the school. When we fail to give the best we have to tre te un that represents us we can expect little from it, for it is the reflection of our spirit and enthusiasm. The people that are the first to knock are always the people that are doing the least to advance the team or the school Whatever may be our opinion of the season, we are bound to admit that every effort to make the team a winning team was made by the coach and players The teams that the Waite squad was matched against in the past season were the best terms of the state, while the White squad was naide up of players who were, as a rule, new at the game. We do not wish to make any excuses or apologies for the defeats that we have suffered, because that is part of the game, it is part of sportsmanship. The finest thing in the true sport is being a good loser, as well as a good winner. Henceforth, let us put our heart, soal. and confidence in our terms and we shall have a good reason to expect better results.

There are several teams that belong to Waite that we have a right to be proud of. The Hi-Y team lost few games of the season, in fact, they were victorious in far more games than they lost.

The Freshman team deserves mention for the splendid showing made in the games that were played during the season. It is to the Freshman team of today that we look for the winning varsity of the future.

The Quill and Dugger and Forum teams gave a number of exhibitions of clear sportsmanship in the preliminaries to the varsity games. Out of the four games played by the Q. D. team only one was lost and that by one point.

The Seniors won the intramural contest for the Waite championship.

Goldstein

"Abe" possessed all the requisites of a successful basketball player; consistency, speed. brains. He was easily the star of the team and his absolute dependability gave the team a feeling of confidence. Goldstein will not be on the Waite quintet next year.

Berndt

"Cully" started the game as guard, but before the end of the season Coach Rupp considered him a good candidate for a forward position and placed him in that position. Cully will have a chance to show his proficiency again next year.

McInnes

Mac was the steady, dependable, cool-headed lad who guarded the basket. He was one of the few men who emerged from the team of 1919 and held down his position on the team of 1920. Wac will not be in the Purple and Gold lineup when the season opens in 1921.

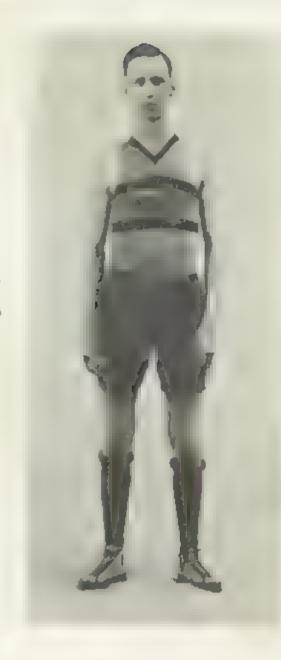

Stammon

Dutch was a new find in the basketball world when the season opened in January. Whether Stammon ever played basketball or not before he joined the Waite squad matters little; we only know that he played a good game this season, and that we are expecting to see him play a better one next year.

Printy

Printy was the long, lanky center for the team who emmigrated from St. John's to give his best to the Purple and Gold squad. We were pleased to find Printy a good fighter and a great assistance to the Waite squad. He will not be with the squad next year.

Ulrich

Ulrich was the beef of the team. He served in the capacity of guard. As Ulrich has two more years at Waite he should be a great aid to the team next season, as most of the varsity squad graduate in June.

Trautwein

"Hodge" was the captain of the 1920 team. He was not elected, however, until the season was partially completed. Trautwein was a coolheaded, consistent player who was always at the right place at the right time. Trautwein graduates in June.

Nauts

This was Walter's first year at Waite, but he showed exceptional talent as a forward. He was a man the coach could use at any time and by his hard fighting helped to strengthen the lineup. Nauts will not be with the team in 1921.

Girls' Gym

Lew people realize how much the gym has done for the girls of Waite High School, under the able leadership of the two capable instructors, Miss Lecklider and Miss Armbruster. The girls, on their part, have shown their appreciation also by working furthfully, striving to even better last year's reputation. They spend two afternoons of the week there, Wednesday and Friday, and the Freshmen and Sophomores have a class one school period each of these days. Wednesday afternoon the Advanced Gym Class is held, consisting, for the most part, of Juniors and Semors, although there are some of the younger classmates enrolled. In Advanced Gym the girls are taught drills of all kinds, dancing, marching, and games. On Friday afternoons the teams practice bask, thall. From the close of school until 2 o'clock on Friday afternoons the girls are free to come in the gym and dance.

Near the close of the school year was held the Annual Gymnasium Exhibition. This was one of the important events of the year in the line of gym work and took place Wednesday evening, May 26. The regular gymnasium classes performed with wand drills, damb bed drills, free hand drills, and dancing. The Advanced Class had a difficult Indian club drill, dances, and marching. It was clear to be seen at this exhibition the careful training that the girls had received throughout the year and what had really been accomplished in the line of gym work. We all hope that girls gym work will be as successful next year and in the years to come as it was during the past season.

Esther Gerber

Esther was a fine forward. At every available opportunity, she, with a sure aim and a steady arm, threw the ball in the basket. In every game Gerber firmly held her own, and one can easily say "she fought a good fight." Esther will be lost by graduation.:

Helen Bennett

Helen, on account of her height and alertness, made herself an important factor in the reputation of the team. At a toss-up, Bennett invariably got the ball in time to throw it to her side center. Helen will not be lost by graduation.

Jane Wiles

Jane was the tie which secured the team their excellent passwork during the year. A great point to her credit belongs to her clean playing and cheerfulness as a loser. The team will be glad to look forward to her again next year.

Esther Fritz

Fritzie, although not having the intention at the beginning of the year, to be a forward, filled the vacant place with surprising ability. She managed to be all over her section at once and the two Esthers showed good teamwork together. Happily Esther will not be lost by graduation.

Grace Plain

Plain, our staunch and sturdy guard, has been true to her record all season and has played a clean game at every chance. Her ability to stick to her opponent labels her as first-class. Lucky for the team, Grace will serve next year.

Helen Williams

Helen, though rather light, made another good guard for she possessed a talent for sticking to her opponent. In every game, Helen could be relied upon, playing with her other guard and breaking the throws of the opposing side.

The Season in Girls' Basketball

This year, unfortunately, luck has almost always been on the opposing side for the Girls. Baskethall Team, but they have tried to sacceed in keeping up the reputation of last year's team. Although less experienced and lighter than that of the preceding year, they have made a gall int show and deserve to receive a just reward. Also, we can only boast of one old player out of the six girls comprising the team of last year. Tive of the girls graduated, leaving only one member to carry on the work, Esther Gerber, this year's captain. But every girl, when entering into a game, used every ounce of strength and it was a consolation to see their fine passwork and 'real playing, even though they did not always win.

One great asset to the team was their clean playing. All games were the same to them, just clean and fair all the way through. Then too, the girls showed their wonderful spirit as losers and lived up to the old saying, 'It is better to be a good loser than a poor winner."

In Miss Lecklider, the coach, the girls found a competent leader. She patiently corrected their errors and carefully instructed them in the ways of correct and successful playing.

We must not forget to speak of the second team. They, in their turn, showed valuable material for a winning team next year, and although playing only one game this year, they showed their true spirit.

The following is a line-up of the first and second teams:

FIRST TEAM		SECOND TEAM
E. Gerber (Capt.)	R. F
E. Fritz.	L.F.	H. Haley
H. Bennett	C	. E. Brenner
J. Wiles	S. C.	I. St. Clair
H. Williams	R,G	A. Nauts
G. Plain	$I_{}G$	H. Williams

WAITE VS. LASALLE & KOCH'S

The girls at least had a good start. Although Lasalle & Koch's team professed to have a winning team, they gracefully submitted to a superior six when they came in contact with Waite's girls. The game showed good, clean playing and when the final whistle blew, Waite came out at the big end with a score of 30 to 7. Westfall was chief point-getter.

WAITE VS. SCOTT

Waite suffered their first defeat at the hands of Scott Basketball Team. The game was fast from the time the girls walked on the floor until the end, with every girl playing her best. Although the score ended 14-29, Scott's favor, they did not get their points without a struggle. Gerber was chief point getter in this game.

WAITE VS. NORMAL

In the game with Normal, before an audience of about one hundred people, the playing waxed fast and furious. The final total was 17-14 with Normal as winners, but Waite outclassed the opposing team in every detail and proved this point in their spirit as good losers.

WAITE VS. KU PHI'S

On March 13, at the Y. W. C. A. the Waite sextette bowed down in an overwhelming defeat. The team did not fully expect to win, therefore it was not such a big disappointment, the Ku Phi's having the reputation of being the foremost girls' team in the city, with Toledo's championship. One topic that is popular in a game like this is the clean playing, to Waite's credit, which is so clearly shown in every game.

WAITE VS. NORMAL

On March 24, Waite came in contact with the Normal team again and lost, the score being 9 20. The girls put up a heroic fight, but a victory was not to be theirs, and Normal scored again.

WAITE RESERVES VS. SCOTT RESERVES

Waite Reserves' only game of the season was played in the Waite Gym on l'ebruary 27. For a second team it was very exciting, the final score not being determined until the last few minutes of the game. About two minutes before the end the score was 11-10, Waite's favor, when Scott's forward made their last basket, making the score a point ahead, giving Scott the victory. We expect great things of Waite's second team next year and we know that they will keep up the good work.

The Swedish jitney-driver drew up beside the road, jumped out and with wrench in hand crawled under the auto. Taking advantage of the stop, the only passenger, a German, proceeded to eat a lunch, consisting mainly of Limberger cheese. Suddenly the driver emerged from beneath the machine, and with bulging eyes, stood looking at the machine.

"What's the matter?" said the German between the mouthfuls of cheese. "Ay don't know," said Ole, "but ay tank the engine bane dead."

AN investigation conducted by the student body at Waite High School recently, shows that 91 per cent of the pupils who drive cars use Champion Spark Plugs in their motors.

This overwhelming majority is due to the fact

Dancing

Woman's Building

High School students are considered among the best dancers in the city. Many students join my classes during the season and unconsciously impart their knowledge to their friends. There is more to modern dancing than just moving around the floor to music. The swing of the body, the position, attit to and genera appearance mean a great deal. Join one of my classes which open in September, and every six weeks thereafter and be among the best dancers. The advanced classes are popular for those who already dance. A new step is taught each lesson.

DEAR MILROY: How come every time I kiss a girl she shuts her eyes?
Yours,

J. DAVIES.

Ans. Send your photo and I will be more able to answer your query.

MR. LEANDER: (1) How can I remove freekles from behind my ears? (2) How can I get my hair the shade of Lucille Kelly's?

ALYCE McBRIDE.

Ans.—(1) Take four drops of Hydrochloric Acid, four grains of Bluc Vitrol, mix in one pint of Turpentine and apply until results are reached. (2) If you have tried henna I know of nothing that will help you. You might try washing it.

DEAR MIL.: Doctor says I must diet to reduce. What shall I do? "Tubby" Woods.

Ans.—Take two banana skins, an old shoe (a horse shoe will answer the purpose), three china eggs, one of Tiedtke's steaks, four apples, the hulls of six peanuts; put them in a copper boiler and boil for two months. Then take a sledge hammer and beat to a pulp, throw away, and eat the sledge hammer.

DEAR SIR: Where shall I go on my vacation this summer?

ELENORE DURAIN.

Ans.—Go away.

Sir: Lucretia Abbott says she is out with a different fellow every night. What can I do to be like her?

SWAIN VANWORMER.

Ans.—If Swain will send a self-addressed stamped envelope we will try to answer his question.

A Significant Sign

The familiar words "Toledo—No Springs—Honest Weight" stand on Toledo Scales the world over, a guaranty of protection to merchant and customer.

Toledo Scales are springless and therefore insensible to changes in temperature; automatic, weighing and computing without hand operations or mental calculations; visible in operation, clearly displaying weight and value by means of brilliantly illuminated indications; attractive, sanitary, sensitive to the weight of a feather, and unerringly accurate—the achievement of twenty years experience in building springless automatic scales exclusively.

For these reasons and because it pleases their customers and attracts new ones, thousands of merchants display the above sign in their stores.

EDYTHE B.: "Be more explicit; which one did the clock strike?"

Balsmeyer: "What have you got?"

WAITER: "I've got liver, calf's brains, pig's feet-

BALSMEYER: "Hold on there! I don't want a description of your physical peculiarities. I want to know what you have to eat."

H. STRAUB: "Did I ever tell you the story about the dirty window?" ED. RIENDEAU: No; tell me about it."

H. S.: "No use-you couldn't see through it."

Walter Seighist: "How near were you to the right answer to the fifth?" Pete Quinlan: "Two seats away."

Doris NELSON: "You used to call me the light of your life."

CLAUD: "Bah! But I had no idea how much it would cost to keep it burning."

CARL TREMPF: "Don't you think Red Kelly is the very image of Melvin K.?" ERNIE SCHATZ: "Yes, the resemblance is something awful."

[&]quot;Calvin Reed is going to give himself dead away some of these days."

"That's good," assenteth Robert Strub.

"Yes, he died this morning."

"In one way the clock makers are independent of the labor troubles," explained Mr. Van Deusen.

"That's good, isn't it," said Miss Pray innocently, 'but how?"

"Simply because in clock works the hands do not strike."

"My aunt has wonderful teeth."

"Zat so?"

"Yes, both of them."

GEO. HUNTER: "I wonder how it came that I was chosen comic editor?" GEO. BOOTH: "Have you a pocket mirror?" "That requires reflection."

"A printed slip directing me to paste one-half of each in a scrap book."

"Do I bore you?" said the mosquito politely, as he sunk a half inch shaft into the man's leg.

"Not at all," replied the man, squashing him with a book, "How do I strike you?"

Place: Crowded Street Car-

"No, wait until we get home."

Two men walked down the street carrying a corpse: Said the foremost, "How much do we get out of this?" The dead man said "nothing."

"How did the bridge-tenders' strike end?"

"They fought it to a draw and then fell in."

"Let me see," said the jewelry clerk, who, selling Roy Milbourne an engagement ring, had forgotten the date, "this is the fifth is it not?"

"No, sir!" indignantly, "this is only my third."

IN CHOOSING

After graduation Young Women realize they are about to embark on a career, which is a decisive step to their future.

The average Young Woman chooses a profession to follow until she takes up the care of her own home, which is her ultimate desire.

There are many features to be considered in selecting a position in which the more important are:

One of Our Rest Rooms

PERMANENCY

During financial depression the telephone replaces travel for the transaction of business; in fact during all emergencies the telephone is the stabilizing utility. This insures permanency of the positions in this industry.

ENVIRONMENT

Home-like surroundings are maintained, and privacy in Rest-Rooms, Locker-Rooms and Dining-Rooms is assured by having separate quarters for all male employees.

ASSOCIATES

Only Young Women of good moral character are employed by our Companies.

A PROFESSION

HABITS

Matter of fact, work-a-day methods are unknown in our midst. Proper training and future supervision develops efficiency and supplements the mental training you have just received, fitting you to lead a systematic future.

HARMONY

Harmony among employees is the keynote to success and has been the dominating rule and guide to the present high state of development of the Bell System.

PROMOTION

Promotions to higher positions are made from the ranks and your opportunities are bounded only by your personal limitations.

REMUNERATION

in this profession is in accord with any industry for like responsibilities.

In addition to a weekly salary the Bell System maintains, without expense to the employee, a liberal Disability and Pension Plan, which is far more liberal than that offered by any commercial insurance company.

Under the foregoing points it is possible to set forth only a few of the many advantages of connecting yourself with this organization. A call at the Employment Supervisor's Office of the Branch you are interested in, will enlighten you on any doubtful points.

We have a number of positions open for the Summer months which will couble Under Grad ares during the vacation to become acquainted with the Company and be trained in a profession upon graduation.

Your personal inspection and that of your parents is cordially invited

HERB COLVIN: "What kind of a cigar is that?"
PAUL EVANS: "It's called "The Soldier Boy"."
HERBERT: "H'm, I notice it belongs to the ranks."

I Wonder

What brought Walt Seigrist back.

Why does a crow.

If its a bible class every Tuesday and Thursday in 126.

If the chaperones at the "Lit" dances get enough sleep.

If the Semors know their colors or motto.

If Robert Babione doesn't think he knows it all.

If Cyril Culp will ever vote for class officers.

If George Schlosser could unbend from that rigid, upright form.

The library silent and deserted;
A real fire alarm.

KINKER: "Riely's body has been recovered."

KIKER: "Zat so? I didn't know he had been drowned?"
KINKER: "He hasn't. Just bought a new suit of clothes."

ESTHER RUPPEL: "My right cheek burns so; what can I do to stop it?" CHARLOTTE M.: "Tell Howard to shave oftener."

MR. SEVERANCE: "Why do all bank cashiers run to Canada?"
H. MILL: "I don't know, sir."
MR. SEVERANCES "Because that's the only place 'Toronto'."

The boy stood on the ballroom floor,

His feet were in his shoes;

A blush crept o'er his handsome face,

For a garter is tough to lose.

The officers of the Young Women's Christian Association are being painted and put into condition for the winter.—Daily Error.

[&]quot;There is one thing we know about death," said Miss Gates, gravely.

[&]quot;And that is?" queried Anthony M.

[&]quot;It is always fatal," more gravely.

Was there a man with soul so dead
Who ne'er to himself hath said,
When he stubbed his toe against the bed,
!!--?!!--?!!--????

STUART C. a student of Waite High School in this city, was badly injured when his motorcycle threw bin about two nules from the city. Duly Error.

Characteristic Remarks of Some of Our Famous Men

JIMMIR FEAK: Do we cat today? MR. KLAG: Strike two, ball one.

BONI PETCOFF: Mr. Mathias may I go in the library. I forgot to sign up?

HERB COLVIN: May I have a hall permit?

ED. PRINTY: I'm not prepared.
HAROLD M.:Yeah, we had a quart.
ED. KARL: I left my work at home.
MR. SEVERANCE: Anyone else today?

P. Evans: Oh m'gosh!

R. WEBSTER: Hey, Ernie, lend me a nickel?

Roy M.: I lost $2.00 last night.

ART LIPNER: "It is well perhaps to love wisely, but it is more fun to love foolishly."

ELLEN YENZER: "I could sing in any flat, if I only had the key."

A woman doesn't have to be thin to go through her husband's pockets. She doesn't even have to be small.

If two Irishmen were standing within two feet of one another, in two feet of snow, what time is it?

ROBERT BABIONE: "Winter time."

Heard in Mr. Severance's class: "A bank failure may not upset a depositor, but he is liable to lose his balance."

Wipow: If John had only made a will there would not be all this difficulty about the property.

VISITOR: Do the lawyers bother you?

Winow: Bother me? They almost worry me to death. I sometimes almost wish that John hadn't died.

Read: "The Wonders of the Curling Iron," by John McColl.

"The Value of a Car, or How to Make a Fortune from Hairpins," by S. V. W.

WANTED: A lady to wash, iron and milk two cows .- Daily Error.

FIRST GIRL: Do you and Jack go canoeing much? SECOND GIRL: No, we have a devenport at home.

SHE: Do you approve of the modern way that dancers hold their partners? HE: Well, they might do away with holding one arm out to the side.

Why is a married man like fire? Because he provokes his wife by going out nights.

And get a wife who uses slang:

I'll cut the marriage knot in twain
And never see my wife again;
And then around the world I'll walk
To find a wife who knows how to talk,
Who wont call dollars plunks or beans
Or call my dainty trousers jeans.

Heard in the "only hotel" of a small town: "Have you a room with running water?"

"No, we had one last week, but the manager fixed the roof."

HE: Shall we dance or talk?

Sign: I'm awfully tired; let's dance.

A teacher, conducting a class, was suddenly interrupted by the entrance of an overly ripe peach. The peach entered by way of an open window, and spread itself upon the teacher's head. The teacher rushed outside and caught two guilty-looking small boys.

"Did you throw that peach?" he demanded of the first one.

The answer was an emphatic "No!"

"Do you know who threw that?"

"No, sir, I don't," was the reply, "but I told him not to do it."

Our Advertisers

ITHOUT the advertising that the various firms have so liberally contributed to the Annual, it would be impossible to have a satisfactory "Purple and Gold." The support given the "Purple and Gold" is an expression of the friendly relations existing between the advertisers and the Waite patrons. When you contemplate any business transactions, bear in mind that the firm that gives you a square deal in school will give you one out of school, and the quality of service rendered and the grade of products received will exceed their expression of good will. With a desire to continue these friendly relations we recommend all our advertisers to the readers of the "Purple and Gold."
